Section tells how fashion show will help ailing kids 'make a wish'

Proceeds from a Forbes Newspapers spring fashion show to be held next week in Somerville will go to the Make-A-Wish Foundation. The organization helps children with lifethreatening illnesses to meet celebrities or visit special places with their families.

Details of the show, some of the fashions to be featured, and the foundation are in a special 16-page tabloid section, "Wishes for Spring '90" inside this issue.

Advance purchase of the $15 tickets is recommended; seating is limited. Ticket sales sites are listed in the advertisement in his newspaper and in the story in the special section.

Board candidates eye budget process

By DONALD PIZZI Reporter staff writer

The six candidates for the Board of Education recently commented on the proposed 1990 school budget, which will be discussed at a public hearing on March 27.

"It's disappointing that the budget is so confusing," said Robert Bengivenga. "It's almost impossible to comprehend without making numerous phone calls and asking numerous questions. There's just not enough detail, givenga feels that board has begun to disclose more during the budget process.

Things are definitely getting better. The board is talking a little more, making the public more aware," he said. "By the same token, the public has to come out to the board meetings if they have questions, and not enough people are. The budget hearing is March 27, and the public has a right and a duty to be there.

board members) are trying hard to work with the community. When a question (concerning the budget) is asked, I think the board does their best to sufficiently answer it."

"It's really a Catch-22 situation," Pio Pennisi said of the school budget. "You want to keep the budget low, but about 90 percent of it is fixed, and the state is constantly mandating more and more programs without funding them."

Pennisi thinks the solution lies in confronting the state on the mandated programs.

"People have to start writing their state representatives and let them know that these programs have to be funded by the state if they are going to be mandated," Pennisi said. " I think that's the only way to get these budgets down

Hearing set for pool utility

By DAVE PILLA Reporter editor

The Borough Council voted unanimously Thursday night to introduce a swimming pool utility ordinance, and if the mood of the meeting was any indication, final adoption of the proposal next week is certain.

The council will hold a public hearing and final adoption vote on the creating of the utility next Thursday, March 29 at 8 p.m. Echoing her fellow council members, Linda Dashuta com-mented, "I don't feel that we're just jumping into the pool busi-ness. I feel the utility is the best way to go.'

Before voting on the introduction, the council took comments from a roomful of residents, most of whom pleading with the governing body to move ahead with the utility, which would in effect allow the borough to take over operation of the privately held but financially ailing South Plainfield Community Pool.

"Don't decide against the pool utility based on the opinions of those who don't use it," said Donna Egan, a current pool member. "If you base your decision on that, you could have people say, don't fix up the parks because I don't use them, don't approve funds for the library because I don't use it."

Though most of the residents at the meeting supported the borough's move toward takeover of the pool facility, some questioned the methods to be used to finance the operation.

"I don't think we've examined this entirely," said Larry Rand-olph. "If the council is going to

Meeting to focus on well water problems

By DONALD PIZZI

Reporter staff writer

A meeting to inform residents of developments concerning borough well water contamination will be held on Tuesday, March 27, South Plainfield health officer Michael Bonk said this week. The meeting, which will be held at the administration building on Cromwell Place at 7:30 p.m., will be attended by Bonk and members of his staff, as well as Bor-ough Council Health, Welfare and Environment liaison John Pulomena

"The Board of Health and the mayor and council are extremely concerned about the well problems," Bonk said. "This has not been an easy process, but I believe it is finally starting to bear pany, and some understanding is in the process of being worked out. Ed Kubula of the BPU has been particularly helpful throughout all this." The focus of these meetings, according to Bonk, has been to complete plans that would have Elizabethtown Water extend water lines to the homes of the af-fected residents. A preliminary schedule would have 10 South Plainfield streets being connected to the water lines.

The streets that would be af-fected are Pitt, Bergen, Rush and Woolworth streets, and New York, Barone, Camden, Anthony, Amboy and Tremont avenues.

"That would be the first phase of the water line extensions," Bonk said. "If the contamination fruit. We have been meeting with is determined to be more extenthe Board of Public Utilities and sive, then we'd have a second the Elizabethtown Water Com- phase, where we would add more streets." Bonk stressed that all borough residents should make arrangements to tie into the borough's water lines. "If you have water, you should tie in. If not, you'll be tied in through these water extensions," he said. "There is a good chance that the costs will be reimbursed in part or in full by the Department of Environmental Protec-tion's Spill Fund." The contamination was first discovered in December, when the Health Department discovered high levels of a the toxic chemical trich-lorethylene in wells on five borough streets in the vicinity of Pitt Street.

'Candidates Night' to test board hopefuls

A joint PTA-PTSO sponsored "Candidates Night" debate will be held on Monday, April 2 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at John E. Riley School. The debate will present Board of Education candidates to the voters in preparation for the elections on April 24th.

The moderator of the debate will be Nicholas F. Delmonico, an experienced moderator who has served as superintendent of the Rahway school district for the past 13 years. His prior experience includes positions as both an elementary school principal and a high school assistant principal. Delmonico enjoys moderating school board candidates nights, he says, because it gives him an insight into other school systems.

To date, three of the six candidates have agreed to participate in the "Candidates Night" debate. They are Pio Pennisi, Todd Richter and Joseph Whitman.

The "Candidates Night" will follow debate format. Beginning at 7 p.m., audience members will be invited to write questions to the candidates on the topic of their choice. They may address these questions to a particular candidate if desired. All written questions will be collected prior to the start of the oral debate and presented to Delmonico.

Each candidate will have three minutes for an opening and closing statement. Delmonico will then read the questions submitted by the audience. The candidate to whom the question is directed will have two minutes to reply, and each remaining candidate wishing to answer the question will have one minute for reply.

A short break with refreshments is planned midway through the debate.

This debate will be the only forum for the candidates before the Board of Education election on April 24. It is sponsored through the joint efforts of the PTA-PTSO of Riley, Roosevelt, Franklin, Kennedy and the Middle schools. Pat Biancolli, Riley PTSO president, explained that the reason for the "Candidates Night" is "to give our parents the opportunity to hear and question the candidates and thereby make an informed decision when they vote on April 24th."

It should also be noted that this new board will be the one to interview and hire the new South Plainfield superintendent of schools.

The Candidates Night is presented to the voters of South Plainfield as a community service. It is intended to provide the opportunity for the candidates to present their views on relevant educational issues. It will also provide the only opportunity for the voting public to hear and question the platforms of the candidates.

Although three candidates have yet to commit to the debate, the committee is hopeful that all six candidates will agree to participate. All South Plainfield residents are encouraged to attend this important event.

GRANDPARENTS had their day at Riley School last week, as the youngsters showed them good old fashioned hospitality.

A grand time for grandparents provided by students at Riley

By DONALD PIZZI Reporter staff writer

Students at Riley school got a chance to enjoy one of life's simple pleasures last week: they got to spend some time with their grandparents.

Over 300 people took advantage of the school's third annual Grandparent's Day, where they were treated to a light lunch and a show featuring kindergarten through third grade students.

"We started this three years ago for the senior citizens," said Linda Dec, who helped coordinate the event. "Last year we incorporated it into Grandparent's Day, and had over 200 guests. This year, as you can see, we have another great turnout."

In addition to the guests of honor, those in attendance included Superintendent of Schools Leonard Tobias, Board of Education president Randy Brooks, and board members Harry Kuhn, Emil Leporino and Marjorie Reedy.

Also at Riley School Thursday was the man it was named after: John E. Riley.

Vandals cause school damage

Vandals who scaled Franklin School last week and destroyed air vents caused extensive water damage to the school's interior, according to police reports.

The unknown suspects climbed onto the building's roof between 5 p.m. on Friday, March 16 and 9 a.m. on Sunday, March 18. Once on top, the vandals broke off 23 of the air vents using their feet or hands.

School district plant manager Paul Phillips told police rainwater that collected on the roof entered the building through the broken six- and eight-inch vents. Phillips said that 16 rooms in the school suffered damage to ceiling tiles, while water ruined the floor and furnishings in seven rooms.

Also damaged, according to police reports, were the hallway and principal's office.

Due to the severity of the damage, police are asking anyone with information on the incident to come forward.

The exact amount of damage is not yet known.

spend a half million on recreation, the Walnut Street park would be a good area for improvement."

Borough resident Frank Mikorski expressed concern over the council's plan to establish a $500,000 bond to back up the proposed utility.

'If you go and ask for a $500,000 bond issue and they ask what's your support, what are you going to say," asked Mikorski. "Can a municipality establish a public utility without a referendum? What happens if the utility can't pay off the bond?" "The bond that would be taken out by the utility for $500,000 would be backed by the borough," said Mayor Daniel Gallagher. "In case of a default, it would have to be paid in full."

Council president Michael Woskey commented that "there is no doubt in my mind, with conservative figures, the pool would not have a debt by 1992."

Woskey said the pool's Board of Trustees now has a debt totaling $317,000, and a membership of about 370 families. This year, the trustees have had to charge a $200 membership fee, plus an addi-tional $250 for a bond for new members to keep the pool going.

With the borough takeover of the pool, Woskey said the fee could possibly be cut to $175 per family, thus attracting more members.

Resident Michael English, who said he is a pool member and that he supports the utility plan, cautioned that the pool would have to

Rabies clinic is scheduled

The South Plainfield Health Department will be conducting its annual rabies inoculation clinic for 1990 at the South Plainfield borough garage, on the corner of Spicer and Belmont avenues.

The dates and times for the clinic are as follows:

Friday, March 30-6 to 8 p.m.

Saturday, March 31 - 9 a.m. to noon.

Dog owners may obtain their pet's 1990 dog license at the clinic if they have not already done so. The current fee for dog licenses is $7.20 for spayed or neutered dogs (owners must present written proof from a vet) or $10.20 if the dog has not been altered.

Cats will also be inoculated. A fee of $2 will be charged. Owners are requested to have their cats in carrying cases. The health department stresses that because of the rabies problem among raccoons in New Jersey, it is imperative that cats get the rabies shot.

Any questions may be directed to the South Plainfield Health Dept. at 754-9000, ext. 230.

bring its membership up to about 680 families for 1991 to meet its first debt payment, which would be about $40,000.

"I want the proposal to go through," said English, "but I want everyone to realize we have to bring the membership up to 680 after the first year.'

Borough resident Gary Hamrah asked if it would be better if the borough simply allowed the pool trustees to declare bankruptcy, then move in to take over the operation at no cost.

"What happens if a non-profit group goes bankrupt," asked Hamrah. "The borough already owns the land."

"The lawyers I talked to said you'd have a minimum of one and half to two years to go through the court system." said Council-man Will Carey. "Meanwhile, a valuable asset goes unused. We'd still be sitting here doing the same thing, only years after the fact.'

Renato Biribin, a member of the pool's Board of Trustees, said the trustees concluded that "the any indication that it's the salary concept of going bankrupt morally unacceptable. "Of the present debt, about 50 to 60 percent is for scary. bonds to residents of South Plainfield," said Biribin. "In bankruptcy, those people would have absolutely no chance to get their money back. Another $38,000 or so is in accounts payable debts to local merchants - plumbers, painters, electricians, etc. - we always tried to use local business people. They would lose their money also.

"With bankruptcy, you would also lose utilities such as water, sewer. You would have to post a bond to get those back.'

The public comments concluded with an impassioned plea from Frank Licato, who had served as president of the pool trustees for 20 years:

"Over the years the pool has helped many borough children learn to swim, it provided lifesaving classes, the Board of Education has used it for child therapy. The contributions the pool has made to the community are immeasurable.'

If passed, the pool utility ordinance would establish a public utility owned and operated by the borough and under the Recreation Department's management. The facility would be named The South Plainfield Swimming Pool Complex.

All revenues derived from the operation will be kept in a separate account for the utility.

Our Opinion

Lend your support to the pool utility plan

The Borough Council last week took a determined step toward creating a public utility to take over the financially ailing South Plainfield Community Pool, by voting unanimously to introduce an ordinance to create the utility.

The full house that showed up to hear about the plan was overwhelmingly in favor of the borough's move to assume control of the facility, though some doubts as to the town's ability to turn around the pool's downhill financial trend were voiced. In the end, most of those attending seemed convinced hat the borough's Recreation Department can turn the pool into a valuable part of the town's recreation program.

The governing body is banking on the assumption that a sharp cut in fees will bring the number of families enrolled as members of the pool up from about 370 now to about 680 in 1991 the rough figure needed to make the first debt payment the pool utility will have to face at that time. Considering the fact that the pool's membership was pushing 900 a few years ago, that optimistic assessment of the utility's future is reasonable.

The council will conduct a public hearing on the adoption of the utility ordinance next Thursday night, and if the upbeat mood prevalent last week is any indication, the proposal will pass with little effort. However, all those residents of South Plainfield who are interested in seeing a borough-managed pool facility with a much-reduced fee structure should contact local officials - by phone, by letter or by attending the meeting - and lend support to the effort to save the pool.

Your Opinion

New school board should work to repair buildings

To The Reporter:

In her splendor and majestic glory, our Roosevelt School of South Plainfield has stood as a great giant among our schools for almost 60 years. She is a contribution of intellect and dedication from those of the past who cared for the needs of our school children. She must now be prepared for a new vision as all of us who age knows well.

Purchasing of portable class-rooms to reduce overcrowding cannot be our only solution. We have been called upon and must rise to the occasion with the same fervor of purpose exhibited by those preceding us and break ground for additional classrooms for our little loved ones. They have been forgotten as the Taj Mahals from gambling have risen as our priority.

We will soon be welcoming new members to our Board of Education. Hopefully, this reorganization of trusted elected represenway to reach this goal. As the majority of the South Plainfield electorate is content with their updated schools, they will not vote in favor. If their children were bused to Roosevelt School, they would observe for themselves the compelling need to consider all the school children, not just their own, and vote for new classrooms. The substandard basement asbestos-covered classrooms, sewer odors, and lead pipes, leaching water pipes are but some of the problems of an aging structure. We can wait no longer for others to recognize our needs. Will we hide from our turn at greatness and shirk our commitment to our young? The final result will only come from efforts that are within us all.

It is our turn. The hour of need is now! Respectfully submitted to the residents of South Plainfield by a 40-year resident.

A dazed and confused look at the wonderful world of movies

By DONALD PIZZI Reporter staff writer

As a person who is absolutely infatuated with movies, it amazes me that some people actually don't enjoy a night at the theater. My mother, for example, has been to exactly three movies in the last 18 years - "The Godfather," "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "Kramer vs Kramer." I'm sure there are people serving life sentences in prison who get out to the movies more often.

One of my favorite rituals involving going to the movies is looking at all the newspaper ads beforehand. I've decided that if I ever become a movie reviewer, I'll make nothing but forceful statements when I recommend a movie, so I'll be guaranteed of being quoted in the ads.

Let's take a movie like "Joe Versus the Volcano." If you des-cribe it as a "pleasant little movie that avoids all temptations to take itself too seriously," you'll never get into a movie ad. You have to write things like "Riveting! 'Joe Versus the Volcano' erupts with hilarious fun!" Forget proper ing adjectives in. Also, use the word 'riveting' a lot.

Speaking of Joe and his vol-

I guess this kind of copycat advertising isn't too surprising, considering the fact that we're dealing with an industry that made five films about people switching bodies in one year. A friend of mine and I had a terrible time trying to remember if Dudley Moore switched bodies with Tom Hanks, or if it was Kirk Cameron who switched bodies with Fred Savage, or Judge Reinhold and George Burns, or - well, you get the point. What really drives me crazy is her inability to tell actors apart from each other. I can understand this in some instances, because I myself am convinced that Al Pacino and Andy Garcia are the same person.

The old Baptist cemetery on Thank you, New Market Avenue is one of the few places in out town where Gary Kline present-day residents can get a S.P.P.D. glimpse of South Plainfield's past. There, among the broken gravestones and the weed-grown plots, are buried the remains of many of the earliest residents of our area. After having marveled at the dates on the old tombstones, the typical visitor usually asks to see the graves of the veterans. The first ones that are looked for are the Revolutionary War veterans, members of that shadowy group of men known as "Washington's " Their exploits have moved army. beyond the realm of history and into the realm of legend. Fortyfive of these men are buried in our town.

Next to be found are the Civil War veterans. Their graves are easier to locate. Proud of their service to the Union, these men, veterans of the greatest and bloodiest battles ever fought in the western hemisphere, often had the numbers of their regiments carved on their tombstones so that future generations would remember their service. Fortynine Civil War veterans are buried in the old Baptist cemetery.

But between these two wars there were other engagements. Eight of the men buried in the old cemetery are veterans of two of these actions. Their service had a lasting impact upon the future of our national government, yet few people realize this fact today. These men have truly become of the new government. In 1794 he forgotten veterans.

After the Revolutionary War the United States was governed under the Articles of Confederation. Suspicious of a strong national government, Americans saw to it that the major powers of government were left to the individual states. Jealous of each other, the states soon realized that they could not function effectively without a strong central government to deal with problems of a national scope. Out of this realization was born our present con-stitution. The new federal government that assumed power in 1790 under the new constitution instituted a financial program to raise the needed money to support itself. Part of this program was a tax on distilled liquor, mainly whiskey. At this time, the cheapest and most economical way for western farmers to transport their grain crops to the east was to turn the grain into whiskey. Thus, they saw Congress taxing not a luxury but a basic economic product.

Farmers in Pennsylvania began to fight back. Mobs attacked tax collectors and looted government buildings. President George Washington acted quickly to stamp out this threat to the power surrounding states to put down the so-called "Whiskey Rebellion." Faced with an overwhelming armed force, the rebellion Benefit dance was soon collapsed.

After the Revolution, relations between the United States and Great Britain remained strained. As years passed, things grew worse and worse, and war between the two countries broke out once more in 1812. Despite the history of bad feelings between the two countries, the War of 1812 was not a popular war in many sections of the United States. New Jersey was one of the states that had little enthusiasm for fighting another war with Britain. Despite this fact, elements of the New

Project Graduation worth all the hard work and time

To The Reporter:

Last June I had the first-hand opportunity to both be a part of and also to evaluate Project Graduation 1989. Since my son was going to be among the graduates who had the opportunity to attend the alcohol and drug-free party held at Ricochet Racquet Club, I volunteered to serve as a chaperone for a few hours during the evening. Chaperones were set up on a rotation basis so that there was proper coverage for the duration of the party.

Once I was actually there, though, I was so impressed with what I saw that I decided not to leave at the end of my designated shift, and instead stayed for the entire night.

What I saw was an extremely well planned and organized function, one that I myself enjoyed as much as the students. Any parent would have been proud to see our young people so well behaved and having so much fun. Not once did I see a problem of any kind occur. The staff members and parents who organized and planned last year's party and those who are now in the process of arranging the 1990 party should be commended for their countless hours of hard work. Putting together a successful project of this magnitude is not easy. With the huge variety of activities, contests and events that were available, I couldn't believe how smoothly it all ran.

Even though I no longer have children attending South Plainfield High School, I am so totally supportive of this Project Graduation concept that I have already volunteered to help with this year's party in any way I can. If all goes as planned the Class of 1990 will also have an opportunity to participate in an evening of fun that they will enjoy and remember forever.

I encourage the community of South Plainfield to get behind this endeavor and actively support the safety of the 1990 graduates.

More to restaurants than fine dining

By PHYLLIS V. RECKEL Gazette columnist

Although restaurants abound in every neighborhood, and the opening of new eating establishments seems a weekly occurrence, restaurants remain the least safe investment of small businesses.

It's difficult to understand why some ordinary restaurants - with commonplace food, decor, and service remain in business for decades, while others, with creative dishes and attractive surroundings, last only a short time.

edible. The manager came over, upon hearing our complaints, apologized profusely, and added the meals were going to be reprepared and we could eat them or not, but in either case there would be no charge for the entire party.

At this point we were ready to leave but we were also ready to pay for the drinks and appetizers we had consumed. However, he insisted and the long night ended.

no matter how often you eat out in no matter how many places, how many times can you say your meal was outstanding, or even very good? Or, if you can say so, how often can everyone in your party agree?

It seems to me the occasions when every diner at my table agrees his meal was great occurs less and less frequently. However, we are not about to give up trying!

While most dining experiences remain unremarkable or vaguely memorable, there are two experiences that stand out in my mind. One was woeful, the other wonderful

The worst event had to do more with service than food. Ten of us entered a restaurant for the first time, delighted to find the place rather lovely and elegant. Despite having a reservation, we had to wait for a table; but we were enjoying the evening so we really didn't mind.

However, we were mildly annoyed when we had to wait a rather long period for our waitress to take our drink orders and finally serve them. And when she did, she was unable to open the wine bottle so gave it and an opener to one of the diners

It took her an even longer time to take our food orders and finally serve the appetizers. However, when two hours had passed and we had not yet been served our entrees, we were more than mildly annoyed.

A complaint to the maitre d' did get things moving but when the food arrived it was a disaster. Some were cold as if unfrozen but never

When you think about it, inexpensively but very unsatisfactorily.

The best experience had to do, I think, more with psychology than with food or service.

We were young and poor when my husband had to attend a nine-day conference in Paris. Since all of his expenses were paid for, by saving our pennies and accepting grandparental offers to babysit, I was able to go along - our first real vacation since our marriage and our first trip to Europe.

Paris was exciting, romantic, charming; and my high school French made even the French people receptive and friendly. I was having a wonderful time.

About a week into our stay we were included in a rather privileged dinner hosted by hubby's boss at an old Parisian restaurant, Les Jardins des Tuilleries. mentioned by Ernest Hemingway in one of his novels.

The restaurant, nestled in the heart of the city, had an outdoor parklike dining area surrounded by a high wall softened with plants. In its center stood a gigantic tree whose large, leafy limbs allowed the starry night to peak through. Talk about perfection!

After an hour of interesting conversation, delightful wine and zesty appetizers my entree arrived - tournedos avec sauce bearnaise - a succulent, exceedingly tender filet mignon with a delectable accompaniment. It was the most marvelous thing I had ever tasted in my life. It was years before I tried that particular entree again. I was afraid none would ever compare; and I was right. As I get older, the comparisons come closer to the original - but they

Cubism origins explained by State Museum director

By LORIE RUSSO

FAR HILLS - Cubism is the most 'regimented, painstaking and meaculous" form of art, according to Zeltan Buki, who led a discussion on the subject last Thursday in the basement of the Far Hills Municipal Building

The lecture, sponsored by the Somerset Art Association, featured the works of Spaniard Pablo Picasso, the pioneer of Cubism, and Frenchman Georges Braque. The collaboration between the two artists, particularly in the years 1910 to 1912, set the stage for the most dramatic change in art since the Renaissance period.

Although there are no geometric cubes of the traditional kind in either of the artists' works, the name "cubism," first coined by artist Henri Matisse, was picked up by an art critic and soon became the accepted term for this newest form of art. face. Buki, curator of art at the New Jersey State Museum, Trenton, explained to the audience of about 40 art enthusiasts that in viewing the works of Picasso and Braque, to ing. think of a cube not in its traditional, and the space behind the bottle." six-sided geometric form, but in various ways. Even a four-sided box drawn on a blackboard, he said, car be considered a cube.

Just as Zuki breaks down the trad tional forms of the cube to explai cubism, so did Picasso and Brage break down the elements of humaness to find a new way of interpretig life through art. This manipulaton, Zuki said, can be found in a very elementary lesson on art, that space and surface are the two most apor-tant parts of art.

In many paintings of theRenaissance period the surface i divided into two halves with ver specific lines; there is a foregroun, a middle

In a painting if a later period, which depicts a landcape, depth is achieved by alternting light and dark values - the forground is suppressed in dark hue which brings out the backgrond.

Czanne's paintings are said to hae had the greatest impact on the culsts, especially Braque. A far depature from the Renaissance works, where the movement is toward a fied point, his paintings showed the car relationship of one object to nother. There is no fixed point; the till life objects — table, basket, ap-les, and bottle — fill the entire sur-

"There is a continuous back and forth dialogue with the objects,' Buki explained and there is almost a "cinemagraphic" look to the paint-"We can see the inside of a vase Cubism then, according to Buki, portrays each facet of a subject as a unified whole. "The essence of cubism is this: Picasso and Braque made us realize the totality of the image, how it is not a singular object," Buki added

"Cubism and abstract art appeals to the intellect and it is not devoid of the most basic of human essences -

Pollock, Kline among artists in new exhibit

NEW BRUNSWICK - A major traveling exhibition that sheds new light on a little-seen aspect of abstract expressionist art opens this Sunday for a three-month stay at the Jane Voorhees Zimmerli Art Museum, George and Hamilton streets.

Titled "Abstract Expressionism: Other Dimensions," the exhibit encompasses 146 paintings by 43 artists, including such luminaries as Jackson Pollock, Robert Motherwell and Franz Kline as well as lesser-known artists such as Rollin Crampton and Sonia Sekula.

Though abstract expressionism is famous as an area in which artists use huge canvases to accommodate the broad gestures of what came to be known as action painting,' the exhibition at the Zimmerli will concentrate on smallerscale works.

The exhibit, which will be on display at the Zimmerli until June 13, has already been shown at the Terra Museum of American Art in Chicago and the Lowe Art Museum in Coral Gables, Fla.

Located next to Voorhees Hall on the College Avenue campus of Rutgers University, the Zimmerli Museum is open Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Students sweet on the Sugarcubes

By WILLIAM WESTHOVEN

After exploding onto the international music scene in 1988 with a hit debut album smothered by critical praise, the Sugarcubes' reputation preceded them last Wednesday into the College Avenue gym at Rutgers University.

Appearing along with the popular English power pop band, the Primitives, Iceland's Ambassadors of the Odd became the first band of the 90's to play at the "Barn," where many of today's megastars (Bruce Springsteen, Billy Joel and Huey Lewis, to name a few) toiled before graduating to arena and stadium venues.

While it's hard to imagine their bizarre, stream-ofconciousness lyrics and onstage theatrical kitsch ever drawing the same kind of mass appeal as these more the mainstream artists, Cubesters are an energetic, inventive bunch who had no trouble getting the midterm weary Rutgers students on their feet and dancing.

What kind of connection they made with the audience beyond that, however, is suspect. But perhaps the press takes the Sugarcubes' music more seriously than the band does themselves.

Driven by relatively conventional Euro-dance beats reminiscent of acts like Lene Lovich, Joy Division and Gang of Four, musically, the Sugar-cubes broke little ground. But the abstract vocal contrast of petite, mini-skirted Bjork Gudmundsdottir and trumpeter Einar Orn was another matter entirely.

On songs such as the opener, "Traitor," and "Tidal Wave," Gudmundsdottir's powerful voice and range was juxtaposed with Orn's wild ranting and raving that was more monolgue than rap. The combination was provocative, as was the peculiar and often Freudian nature of their lyrics, although the effect did wear thin after a while.

So, too, did their onstage demeanor, which alternated between incendiary and just plain goofy. The singers bumped, danced and stalked around the stage, performing at times what appeared to be a cross between a square dance and a tribal mating ritual. Orn, in fact, seemed particularly taken by a dance step that he must have stolen from an old Popeye cartoon.

And both singers never suppresed their urge to produce every kind of noise imaginable, from falsetto gur-

Again, their actions at first were visually fascinating and at times a charming contrast to the dark, dramatic mood created by the rest of the band, especially when they performed an brief, hilarious impersonation of the dreadful Milli Vanilli. after a certain point. First-rate production, how-wearing out its welcome before it ended. An attractive stage and a slick light show smoothed over a few of the rough edges, and fortunately, the sound improved over the course of the evening.

The song sequence, which saved several of the band's best songs ("Regina," "Birthday" and "Delicious Demon") for the end, was another plus.

While they never knocked the crowd off its feet (the audience, in fact, seemed to respond more emotionally to the Primitives, whose delightful set of kinetic pop was buried under an annalling mix) they

Students sweet on the Sugarcubes crowd on the floor, in fact, was a bizarre sight in itself as a ever-growing inner circle surge-danced in every direction, occasionally lifting members up off the floor and tossing them around.

The Rutgers College Program Council, which ran the show, has gotten the decade off to a good start with this double-bill of promising acts that have helped to keep today's over-produced, programmed music scene on its toes. Surely, the Sugarcubes aren't for everybody, but on this particular evening, for this particular crowd, they were

IT'S ITALIAN 69 MAIN STREET LEBANON, N.J. 201-236-2992

CAFE GRECO

Cafe Greco, located in the Old Lebanon Hotel, Lebanon, N.J. is just what it advertises to be, "It's Italian". Not one of the new variety Italian restaurants that seem to be cropping up in every town. Not one of the more modern Northern Italian restaurants with light creamy sauces, fanciful dishes and exorbitant prices. This is a Southern Italian restaurant with strong, rich red sauces, huge portions and dishes with familiar names.

This is not nouvelle or haute cuisine, nothing fancy here. But it also isn't a pizzeria menu with spaghetti and meatballs. It is good, old fashion Italian cooking with manicotti, lasagne, tortelleni, calamari, eggplant, cacciatora, marsala, pizziola. You recognize the dishes on the menu, no surprises here. Cafe Greco offers you 12 appetizers (average price $6.95) from hot and cold antipasto, mussels, fried calamari or fried clams in a Sicilian sauce, to hot or cold shrimp cocktail. The pasta dishes (10 in all, from tortellini and gnocchi. There are chicken dishes ($12.95), 8 veal's ($14.95), 5 steaks ($13.95 to $19.95), 11 fish and pasta combinations ($14.00 to $16.00) and three Cafe eggplant specialties ($8.95 to $13.95). The chicken and veal are standard fare, with selections of picaccata, cacciatora, franchaise, marsala and parmesean. They are served with either a side order of linguini, or over fettucini, potatoes, or with the fresh vegetable of the day.

The beef entrees include filet mignon, New York strip, pizziola (we ordered one) and steak Antone (a 16 oz. rib eye steak marinated in olive oil, peppercorns and chianti wine for $19.95). Some of the fish and pasta combinations were shrimp marinara parmesean, calamari marinara, zuppa de pesce, lobster fridiablo, and a broiled seafood combination.

Instead of choosing an appetizer, my husband and 1 shared a whole order of linguini with red clam sauce for $9.95. The red clam sauce was rich, thick and loaded with clams. You could eat both sauce and clams with a spoon (which we did).

As we munched on our garlic bread, compliments of the house, we were pleasantly surprised with a garden salad. Although it doesn't say so on the menu, salads come with the meal. Three choices of dressings, vinaigrette, creamy Italian and cheese, are brought to your table for your to choose and apply. I wish more restaurants would serve salads this way.

My husband ordered the steak pizziola, a 12 oz. strip steak broiled and then baked with onions, peppers, mushrooms, and topped with bolognese sauce and mozzarella cheese ($13.95). The steak was cooked as requested, medium rare, and the combination of bolognese sauce, onions, peppers and mushrooms was a tasteful melange.

I ordered the eggplant and shrimp in tomato garlic sauce ($13.95), served on a bed of fettucine. The eggplant was cubed and sauteed, the shrimp was fresh, and the sauce had lots of garlic (just as I like it). The portion was huge and once again I could only eat a part of it, saving the balance for another way. This can be ordered with veal or chicken as well. We finished our dinner with coffee and a delicious cannoli.

Donkey basketball to aid Project Grad

America's craziest and most unpredictable sport, "Donkey Basketball," will be featured at the South Plainfield High School gym on April 22 at 2 p.m. The teams will be made up of district staff members who have volunteered to participate.

Shaw Bros. bring their combination of circus atmosphere and rodeo thrills to town for the benefit of Project Graduation.

The old saying "stubborn as a mule" will be exemplified when the local entries match wits with the donkeys. The odds are that in most cases the donkeys will win. The old rodeo days will be brought to mind when the local Gene Autrys and Roy Rogers take their spills and bounces.

There are guaranteed laughs promised for the entire family during the fun-filled afternoon. You haven't witnessed basketball until you have seen it played on donkeys. Taking a shot at the basket can be very difficult when the donkey decides you have been on his back too long. And every shot at the basket must be taken while sitting on the donkey!

Donkey ball is a laugh a second sport. You won't want to miss seeing your favorite "cowboys" challenge Bucking Pete, Sugar, Old Tiger, Elvis, Suicide and the rest of the donkeys in the big game. The Project Graduation Committee is trying to set a pace in our community to have our students avoid the use of drugs and alcohol, and to show that you can have a good time without the use of either. Project Graduation, an alcohol and drug-free all-night graduation party for South Plainfield seniors, is our current effort. The goal is to provide a "safe" graduation party for the Class of 1990.

Please show your support for Project Graduation by your attendance at the "Craziest Show on Earth." Advance tickets will be available after April 1 at all district schools or by contacting Eve Hook at 561-6321 or Doris Haley at 754-1693.

Poster contest salutes Earth Day

In honor of Earth Day 1990, New Jersey students in grades kindergarten through 12 are invited to participate in a statewide Earth Day Poster Competition. sponsored by the Environmental and Occupational Health Sciences Institute (EOHSI) and Students for Environmental Awareness (SEA) at Rutgers.

"The goal of the contest is to enhance awareness of environmental issues among school children, and to expand Earth Day activities to include them," said Dr. Bernard D. Goldstein, director of EOHSI. Earth Day focuses attention on ways to preserve the quality of our environment.

First place winners will receive an October Glory red maple, a shade tree with brilliant red fall colors, to plant at their schools. The trees have been donated by Princeton Nurseries. Additional prizes include plaques, certificates and t-shirts.

To enter the contest, a student should design a poster reflecting an environmental issue of concern to New Jersey. All posters must be submitted through the child's school.

Contest entries will be judged in one of four groups: kindergar-

Franklin School salutes the Irish

It was indeed the "Top of the mornin" for the parents and friends of the first and second grade students at Franklin Elementary School, as they delighted in the song, dance and music of the St. Patrick's Day Music Festival

The bonnie lassies had on their green ribbons and the lads their green bow ties as they belted out

Entries are due no later than April 2, with awards presented on April 22 during Earth Day celebrations at the UMDNJ-Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in Piscataway.

All schools in New Jersey are invited to participate in the contest. Public schools have been notified of the contest by mail. Private schools wishing to participate can do so by contacting Ann Lipari of EOHSI at 463-4828. EOHSI is jointly administered by the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey and Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey. Students for Environmental Awareness is a national organization, with a chapter at Rutgers. The two have joined to form the Earth Week '90 Coalition, which heads up Earth Day and Earth Week (April 22-28) activities on the UMDNJ and Rutgers cam-Puses in New Brunswick and Piscataway. All events are free and open to the public.

Not a toe was left untapping or a hand unclapping when 20 of Franklin School's finest danced the Irish Jig. And though it be too many to name, there surely was a tear in the eyes of the moms and dads of each of the soloists as they crooned their lovely Irish melodies.

THE TEAM of South Plainfield High School engineering design contest participants.

High School team takes design challenge

On December 14, 1989 South Plainfield High School participated in the state level of the National Engineering Design Challenge (NEDC) at the New Jersey Institute of Technology (NJIT).

Sponsored by the National Society of Professional Engineers and the Junior Engineering Technical Society, the NEDC is a program designed to train students in what they call America's new basics: the ability to critically non-routine problems; the skills to work cooperatively in teams situations; and the capacity to understand entirely new career options, many in the sciences, technology and engineering.

The students were given the opportunity to design and build a working "product" to a problem created by national experts in the area of engineering design com-analyze and apply knowledge to petition and high school competition.

> A limited number of high schools in four states have been chosen to participate in the NEDC, this being the first opportunity South Plainfield has had to participate.

This year's team consisted of the following students: Scott Rocco, Kevin Riley, Chad Cirafesi, Steven Braynock, Michael Eng, Edward Blomquist, Jason King, Thomas Abruzzese, Robert Yannick, Louis Nguyen, Dirk Smith, Fransico Javier, Keith Lehman, Rajat Mathur and Timothy Kildea.

Off the tube, cable television is undergoing scrutiny like never before.

Upset by service interruption, hookup delays, rising rates, billings and programming access to the medium, users are expressing displeasure to their operators — when they can reach them.

When they can't get satisfaction there, they lodge complaints with their governments.

As a consequence, municipalities are taking tougher stances about service and, with help from the state Office of Cable Television, they are gaining sophistication in getting through the maze of refranchising.

At the same time state and federal legislators are promoting more controls and even re-regulation of the industry.

Operators like Suburban Cablevision are countering complaints with more consumer telephone numbers and information, and the industry group representing the 48 cable systems in New Jersey is disputing criticism of high rates, over-long franchises and lack of community access to the medium.

They will hear more. Seventeen out of every 20 New Jersey municipalities have franchises that are due to expire within the next four years. Half the cabled towns in Somerset County are now inside the three year "renewal window" process or will be shortly.

In northwestern Middlesex County, the "window" is wide open in most communities and promises an active ascertainment and negotiation period over the next three years. Metuchen, Highland Park and Edison all entered the process in January and and Piscataway will be into it in May. They'll all be dealing with TKR Tri-System. The licenses in Middlesex Borough and Dunellen have expired and are in review. South Plainfield has already entered a franchise agreement with Storer Cable of Plainfield, which serves North Plainfield and Plainfield also.

Municipal leaders and their advisory groups will in this renewal cycle will be better prepared to examine and negotiate renewals. To cope with a "mad rush" for renewals through 1994, the Office of Cable Television (OCTV) is providing outreach assistance to guide towns through the complexities. Celeste Fasone, the director, said there is an overwhelming demand for advice on matters like outage repates, technical reviews of cable systems, rate history and analysis and service his-"We get hundreds of requests and through a newsletter and a video we show them how to do it (renegotiate renewals)," she says. Both parties have a say over cable. Towns negotiate particulars and service before the OCTV acts on renewals. Under state law, renewals may be awarded for 5 to 15 years. Most are now negotiated in the 10 to 15 year span. None are below ten years in towns served by Forbes Newspapers. Dunellen and Middlesex Borough have had 12 year licenses, the lowest in the northwestern part of Middlesex County. Though "out of the window" their franchise renewals have not been issued pending a review. During that period they stay in operation while the applications are still pending.

Believing that federal deregulation has created a cable monopoly over the past six years, State Sen. Donald T. DiFrancesco of Scotch Plains has introduced legislation to limit the duration. A shorter franchise term would insure better service, he says.

Joel Goldblatt, president of the New Jersey Cable Television Association, counters that this would weaken the leverage of municipalities and discourage operators from investing in new equipment and plants.

DiFrancesco also seeks to assess the fee that operators pay to towns on a gross operating revenue basis, including premium channels, instead of on basic service revenues paid by subscribers, and urges Congress to reconsider reregulation.

The industry association vigorously opposes any increase in the municipal fee as an "unfair tax" on subscribers. The current two percent fee covers a municipality's costs, it refunds for billing errors or service outages within 45 days and 30 day advance notification of rate or channel changes. New Jersey operators say they support the standards.

The Cable Access Project at William Paterson College has performed an extensive study of ownership of cable systems and services in the state (see related story).

state (see related story). It found last year that the average monthly rate for basic service was $14.66 a month, 11 cents below the national average. The U.S. rate doubled between 1978 and 1989.

If increases in rates this year are any indication, the New Jersey average has undoubtedly risen since the report was issued in November.

In this area alone this year C-TEC went up $2 to $18.95, Storer Cable of Plainfield rose $1.75 to $18.95 and Suburban Cablevision hiked its rate $1.75 to $16.25.

Goldblatt, the industry spokesman, says the study is incomplete and inaccurate and examines cable rates in a vacuum. The average price of basic cable service in the state increased only 24 percent from an average of $11.48 to an average of $14.20 since deregulation, he says. The average for basic service plus one premium channel increased 10 percent to $24 52, he said. His judgment: "cable rates have increased since deregulation, but they have hardly soared." Consumers are keeping the phones to cable companies busy with queries and complaints. Helen Naimark, director of the Cable Users Association of New Jersev, a consumer protection group, says dissatisfaction stems from rising rates and unfulfilled expectations about cable service. It's also fueled by mundane telephone overload. The major complaint - more frequent than service - is that people can't get through on the phone," she says. Growth also exacerbates problems. There are more subscribers (1.7 million in the state) and therefore more complaints. New Jersey is now the most cabled state, with 98 percent of the municipalities wired for cable and 62 percent of the homes signed up, the Cable Access Project found. It took this reporter five minutes to reach an unrecorded voice at TKR Tri-System which serves many Somerset and Middlesex County subscribers, and another minute to reach marketing director Steve Bucholz. TKR put in a computerized phone system and is physically fielding more calls -12,000 more a month, he says. Most are about billing and service, including the company's new programming services. 'We know people want us," he says, "and we need to continue evaluating the staffing situation (to handle subscriber calls). Bucholz says the situation is endemic in the cable industry which has grown dynamically. Lynn Mahr, spokesman for the state cable association, amplified that perspective. "It's a relatively young industry and is learning to serve the public," she says. Community access to cable is another service element that can be contentious. Naimark's 150-member cable users group fosters local uses of tv systems to produce and deliver programs of community interest over access channels. Many school districts have taken advantage of the medium. Naimark sees progress but says it comes slowly, partly because local energies often lag behind enthusiasm. Local government, senior citizens and health care facilities are the biggest users. Metuchen is among the communities that has pushed for local program options.

Naimark says institutional linkages developing among businesses, governments, regional school systems and libraries, and says cable technology can assist in managing traffic signalization as in Paterson. In her view, Suburban Cablevision and UA Columbia have done the most to promote access.

The William Paterson report said access needs special attention, especially funding and channel availability at desired times.

Types of access vary but the industry says 97 percent of the operators in the state offer some type of community access, devoting at least part of a channel to the community. Seventy one percent have at least one full channel devoted to access, and some devote up to five channels. Operators say plenty of access time exists but isn't used. Metuchen-Edison Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People pressed TKR to put the channel back on the local system after it was removed several years ago. Several local officials in the area joined the effort to reinstate BET, said NAACP leader Reginald Johnson.

TKR took a survey last year and came up with a $4 million upgrade that includes the addition of five new channels including BET. Other channels being considered are the Learning Channel, Nostalgia Channel, a pay-per-view channel and one of the two comedy networks, HA! and the Comedy Channel.

Buffeted by consumer and government criticism, the state's cable operators countered in March with a public relations offensive. Goldblatt aid critics choose to ignore the fact that under deregulation cable subscribers are "getting more value for their dollar than ever before."

Basic cable subscribers receive on the average 35 channels of programming and pay 47 cents a day for this service. The quality and diversity of programming has increased markedly, the operators say.

They also tout the value of cable in comparison to other entertainment and information options. Here's their view: A family of four can expect to pay at least $16.64 to attend a single two hour movie (based on a $4.16 average national ticket price higher in New Jersey). A typical household with a VCR pays $12-$14 per month for the rental of five or six video tapes. The cost of a daily newspaper subscription alone averages $9.20 per month, and when added to the cost of just one magazine subscription (Sports Illustrated for example at $5.45 per month can easily equal the average monthly cost for cable tv service.)

TKR's addition of five channels this year might cause an inconvenience for customers with a 36 channel box. Although the basic channels will be available, the pay channels will be located above the 36th channel. Customers, in this situation, may have to exchange their current cable box for a new one.

Goldblatt says that that the operators have been upgrading their physical facilities steadily at great ex-says. The association is also combatting a state bill that would extend the sales tax to cable television service. Symptomatic of the official and consumer concerns that attend cable television, other legislation seeks to create a study commission. The industry challenges this idea, too, calling it unnecessary and wasteful.

Congress is examining changes and the Federal Communications Commission is studying competition in the industry. Eschewing reregulation, U.S. Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo proposed customer service standards. These include service and bill payment centers, hookups within seven days, outage corrections within 24 hours and repairs within 36 hours,

Investigators field a myriad of complaints

There are plenty of complaints about cable television and consumers may lodge them with the operator or with the state Office of Cable Television, or both.

The state unit has an investigative staff which deals solely with answering questions or helping resolve problems of cable service consumers. Call 800-624-0331. Leave your name, address, phone number, cable company and your complaint.

Twelve thousand viewers complained in 1988 and the pace was running 30 percent higher through the first half of 1989. Service related matters dominate the calls. Celeste Fasone, director of the office which is a wing of the Board of Public Utilities, said some of the rise can be attributed to growing numbers of subscribers. Advocacy and information services have boosted the visibility of her office, too. Fasone perceives an uneveness in responsiveness to consumers among cable operators. Some, like Suburban Cablevision, provide a subscriber reference guides to billing and service policies and phones.

The Cable Users Association reports that inability to get through to operators by phone is a major problem for consumers. Subscribers unable to resolve a complaint or inquiry through the company may opt to use the OCTV as a third party mediator. Investigators handle written and verbal queries or complaints.

The OCTV's emphasis on consumer education is rare among states. It extends to municipalities as well as to viewers, informing local governments through a newsletter and how-to outreach materials designed to steer them through the maze of franchise renewals. Another kind of access — to programs produced for the television industry — has been an issued in some communities. Take the Black Entertainment Television channel. The pense and that rate flexibility under deregulation has encouraged the development of new services. Delivery of new services has required the expansion of channel capacity, he reports. "More channels have produced a more compelling product which attracts a growing number of subscribers."

The major operators include TKR, Storer and Suburban Cable

There are 48 cable television systems in New Jersey.

There are 22 operators of those systems but the number is changing through consolidations, and many systems cover multiple municipalities.

The operations range in size from tiny Chester-Mendham which serves Bedminster, with upwards of 205 subscribers, to TKR Tri-System with 125,00 subscribers in 27 towns.

TKR is owned by Tele-Communications Inc. (TCI) and Knight-Ridder. TCI shares ownership of the second largest New Jersey system, Storer (218,403 users), with ComCast. TCI and United Cable own UACC, the fourth largest system in the state (169,228 subscribers).

Suburban Cablevision's 207,789 customers make up the third largest cable grouping.

Most of these firms are active in the central part of the state. Storer operates in Middlesex and Union counties, TKR in Middlesex and Somerset counties plus Monmouth, and Suburban in Union County, among others. C-TEC, formerly Com Video, serves 39,639 subscribers in Somerset and neighboring areas.

In addition to CATV service, the larger firms own cable related services. TCI, for example, owns programming services ranging from movie classics to home sports to CNN.

Under six years of deregulation, firms have consolidated. TCI and its partners, for example, account for 36.71% of the 1.7 million subscribers in New Jersey, according to the Cable Access Project of William Paterson College's Center for Communication. The project says that the market share of the four largest cable operators in the state comes to 82.4%.

About half of the cable systems report to corporate headquarters out of state, including TCI in Denver, ComCast in Bala Cynwyd, Pa, C-TEC in Dallas, Pa. and MacLean-Hunter's Suburban Cablevision in Ontario.

All but 11 municipalities are franchised. There are 1.7 million basic subscribers and 1.2 million pay tv subscribers. The state has 28,467 miles of cable in place and the industry employs 3,389 people.

McCann takes sixth in wrestling finals

By WAYNE TILLMAN Reporter Sports Writer

PRINCETON - After a disastrous opening round at the New Jersey state high school wrestling championships, South Plainfield High coach Mike Buggey looked for a silver lining in what had become a very dark cloud. He found it in the form of Kevin McCann.

Sports

Tiger bowlers enjoyed another winning season

Having won a combined total of 77 percent of their matches this past season, the South Plainfield High boys and girls bowling team enjoyed stellar campaigns.

Coach Ralph Fech's boys' squad posted a 14-5-1 record and went on to win the Joe Romer Memorial Tournament. The Tigers were runners-up in the Greater Middlesex Conference's White Division and were fifth among 23 squads entered in the Central Jersey State Sectionals.

Seniors Keith Blue and Mike Weber were selected to the conference's All-White Division Team as was sophomore teammate Bill Panewicz. South Plainfield also received a solid performance from Rich Panzarella, who was 10th in the Greater Middlesex Conference's Individual Championships

South Plainfield's high game of the year was Panewicz' 257. Panewicz also had the high set season with a 17-4 mark. The Lady Tigers were runners-up in the White Division and also took second in the Joe Romer Memorial Tournament.

Seniors Mindy Ingerto and Shari Stivala garnered All-Greater Middlesex Conference honors for South Plainfield. Teammate Jawana Sanders was also rewarded with a spot on the all-conference team.

Stivala took fifth place in the GMC Individual Championships, with Ingerto taking sixth and Sanders ninth. All three girls were awarded with bronze medals for their efforts.

Jawana Sanders score of 220 in one game turned out to be the highest total recorded this season by a Lady Tiger. Ingerto had the high set with a 561, while owning the highest average (160).

Woodbridge recently captured the Greater Middlesex Conference's Boys' Tournament title,

No. McCann didn't win the state title, as South Plainfield's Steve Giordano did the previous year. McCann, however, did give Buggey and Tigers' fans something to cheer about by finishing sixth in the 135-pound weight class at the tourney last week at Princeton University's Jadwin Gym.

McCann opened competition last week by dropping a narrow 3-2 decision to Mike Perrotti of J.P. Stevens. McCann had a reversal to take a 2-1 lead after two periods, but Perrotti came back with a pair of escape points to pull the match out.

With a chance to compete for a state championship gone, he began his quest in the wrestlebacks with a solid 5-2 win over Mike Gallucci of Pascack Valley. Two reversals and an escape were enough for the Tiger junior grappler to move on.

In the next round, he faced John Povolac of Westfield, an opponent he defeated 6-4 in the Region 3 meet two weeks before. McCann came through again, posting a 3-1 victory to advance.

The third round of wrestlebacks saw McCann face another individual he beat at the regionals, Paolo Custudio of Columbia. At the regions, McCann pulled out a 2-1 win to capture the title. At Jadwin, McCann threw him on his back and pinned him in 4:41.

That victory assured him of becoming a state placewinner, but he then lost his next bout, a 4-2 decision to Eric Jamerson of Cherry Hill West, leaving him to wrestle the fifth place bout. He lost that in a close 6-4 decision to Pat Maczko of Phillipsburg.

While his success made South Plainfield happy, the other Tiger grapplers were all knocked out in the preliminaries. "It's a whole bouts and they paid for them."

Pop Warner team holding sign-ups

The South Plainfield Pop Warner Eagles have announced that sign-ups for the spring season will be held April 6 and 7 at the football fieldhouse near the recycling center.

Registration on April 6 will take place from 6-9 p.m. Sign-ups the following day will be conducted from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The cost for one child is $55 (registration fee and performance bond) or $40 per family plus $25 performance bond for each child.

Late registration will be held May 4 from 6-9 p.m. and May 5 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The late registration fee is $60 per child (which includes performance bond) or $45 per family, plus $25 performance bond for each child. The South Plainfield Pop Warner Eagles are open to boys ages 8-14. In addition, there will be girls' cheerleading and performing squads for ages 5-14.

League officials have also announced that there will be a coed flag football league this spring for children ages 7 and younger.

season due to a rigorous schedule tency in both the singles and and the inexperience of youth, will be looking for a big im-provement on that mark in 1990.

Many of the Tigers' losses in '89 came by 5-0 or 4-1 margins, but this year's squad which had to cope all too often with the reality of defeat is trying to switch that role to their opposition. With no less than eight seniors cracking the starting singles and doubles lineup for the Tigers, a winning record is certainly within reach.

Returning as the number one player at singles for the Tigers is Al Catarino, who took over that position after switching from first team doubles midway through his junior year. Catarino showed a lot of improvement in that short period in singles competition at the varsity level and should be tough to handle according to South Plainfield coach, Roger Wood.

"Al gained some valuable experience last season, and should be a little stronger at the first singles spot," Wood said. "He has a very big serve and is good with his forehand and passing shots."

Joining Catarino as a starter in singles is senior captain, Mark Temple. The third singles position will be handled by yet another upperclassmen, Rob Miller. So, although the Tigers are coming off a sub par season, the ability and leadership is there for a turnaround.

"I think our depth and consis-doubles will make us a solid contender in the Greater Middlesex Conference this spring," Wood said. "Our players are enthusiastic about the season and are determined to prove that they are better than last year's record indicates.

John F. Kennedy and Cedar Ridge will be considered the front runners for the top spot in the GMC's White Division. Both schools also have the bulk of their players returning from winning squads. The doubles teams for South Plainfield will also be senior oriented. The first doubles team will consist of seniors Francisco Javier and Peter Chen. Chen played at first doubles for the Tigers in '89 and his experience should help the Cats.

Although practices started over week ago, Coach Wood is hesitant to say whether any of his newcomers will have a shot to play in matches this year.

"It's hard to evaluate the players in a practice situation because there is no pressure on them like in a close match," Wood said. "Our first scrimmage isn't until Friday. After that it will be easier to see if the newer kids can handle themselves on the court at the varsity level.'

South Plainfield had 15 players tryout for this year's team.

Coldwell Banker sees continuing increase in market penetration

News Content Generated by Ad Department

Coldwell Banker expects increases in operating efficiency and employee productivity to fuel a continuing rise in its penetration of the region's residential real estate market in 1990, according to Wayne A. Frahn, president of the firm's New York Metropolitan Region.

"We more than held our own in the extremely soft real estate market that was in place throughout much of 1989," says Frahn. "In fact, we actually experienced slight increases in our market penetration during a period when business was off as much as 40 percent in some areas."

Coldwell Banker's New York Metropolitan Region comprises 178 offices and more than 3,000 sales associates in New Jersey, New York and Connecticut and northeastern Pennsylvania.

"In many ways, 1989 was a year of challenge for everyone associated with Coldwell Banker," say Frahn. "It was a time of restructuring and streamlining. We faced some tough decisions, did what we had to do and emerged much stronger than ever before. We have a clear direction for 1990 and are prepared to stake our claim as the region's premier real estate company.'

Coldwell Banker is a nationally recognized leader in the marketing of residential real estate and one result of the restructuring will be that offices will be better able to follow through on national marketing programs, according to Ed Tonero, director of marketing for the New York Metropolitan Region.

'Our 1990 marketing programs will be increasingly directed to supporting the efforts of our sales associates and to providing a higher level of customer service," says Tonero. "We want it known that we have a staff of progressive, hardworking sales associates who are geared to success."

Office managers will play an increasingly important role in sup-porting sales associates, Tonero adds. "There will be an increased emphasis on establishing priorities and adapting to meet the needs of our customers and clients in what will likely be a stronger real estate market.

One innovation will be the formation of Manager Sales Advisory Councils and Senior Sales Associate Advisory Councils that will help generate "field-inspired" marketing efforts to improve customer services.

ot windermere

Ferruggia Associates, Somerset County builders of luxury homes, announces that the grand opening of Windermere, a luxury community in scenic Warren Township, will take place April 22nd.

Nestled in the foothills of the Watchung Mountains, Windermere provides spectacular views and features custom-crafted homes with up to 3,700 square feet of elegant living space, says builder Charles Ferruggia. "At prices from $349,900 to $449,900, homes at Windermere possess the same outstanding level of craftsmanship found in our larger custom homes selling for $1 million elsewhere.

In addition to enjoying a choice of floor plans from which to choose, homebuyers can further personalize their homes by working with Ferruggia's in-house decorator free of charge, he points out. "Ferruggia Associates gained recognition more than 15 years ago by working with buyers to create residences that would meet individual requisites. In today's competitive real estate market it is even more critical that developers offer the opportunity to add the personal touches that make a house a real home."

Country lanes, with electric lighting designed to resemble turn-ofthe-century gas lamps, wind through the Windermere community, conveying an immediate impression of classic charm that is characteristic of Windermere, Ferruggia says. "Homes will display manor-like roof lines, corniced eaves, and stucco front exteriors with cedar clapboard or optional brick front. Interior appointments include oak railings, an oak foyer floor, and fireplaces with marble or brick face."

Because many models offer a master bedroom downstairs, and two-zone heating and air-conditioning which allows for temperature control on each level, empty nesters can choose to reserve the upper level of their home for visiting guests and family, he adds.

Young professional, Ferruggia observe, find Windermere a wonderful place to start or raise a family. "With four to five bedrooms and 2½ to 3½ bathrooms, families have plenty of room to grow. Children in Warren Township attend Watchung Hills Regional School wihich is rated as one of the state's most outstanding. The area grammar schools are also excellent."

Warren Township is conveniently located near Route 22 and shopping areas such as Short Hills Mall and the Bridgewater Commons Mall. For commuters, nearby Interstate 78 offers easy access to New York, Newark Airport, and Interstate 287.

Twelve models are planned for the community, which will be accentuated throughout with Belgium block curbing. Models will be available for inspection after the grand opening on April 22.

To visit Windermere, take Rt. 22 to Warrenville Road. Proceed north on Warrenville Rd. over the crest of the hill and past Warrenbrook Couuntry Club to the light at Mountain Blvd. Turn right and follow Mountain Blvd. to Windermere approximately onehalf mile on the left. From Route 78 East take exit 36 and turn left onto Mt. Bethel Rd. (From Rt. 78 West turn right onto Mt. Bethel Rd.). Follow Mt. Bethel Rd. South approximately 21/2 miles to Mountain Blvd. Turn left and proceed to Windermere approximately 1/2 mile on the left.

tion will continue to permit funds to be available to veterans, according to Van Sprang.

The last change in VA interest rate occurred July 17, 1989, when it went down from 10 percent to 9.5 percent.

Also effective February 23, 1990, VA increased by one-half percentage point the maximum rates for Graduated Payment Mortgages to 10.25 percent, home improvement loans to 11.5 percent, manufactured home loans to 11.5 percent, manufactured home lot-only loans to 12 percent, and manufactured home and lot loans to 12 percent.

In the federal fiscal year that ended October 1, 1989, VA guaranteed more than 188,000 home loans amounting to a total of $14.4 billion. Van Sprang said, "the Newark Regional Office guaranteed 2,575 home loans in the past fiscal year amounting to over $235.5 million."

VA home loans may be used to purchase, improve, or refinance a house or condominium, and to purchase or refinance a manufactured home.

Real estate foundation awards scholarships

Realtor Patricia Ryan, president of the Somerset County Board of Realtors, announced today that the New Jersey Association of Realtors Educational Foundation will be awarding up to eleven scholarships to students pursuing careers in real estate related fields. There will be up to ten $1,000.00 scholarships, including the C. Armel Nutter Scholarship, and a special $2,000.00 scholarship, the Nancy F. Reynolds Scholarship, to be awarded. Students must be bona-fide residents of New Jersey entering their first to fourth years of college, or in advanced degree programs.

Applications may be obtained from the Somerset County Board of Realtors office at 275 E. Main St., Somerville, N.J. and must be returned to the New Jersey Association of Realtors Educational Foundation, P.O. Box 2098, Edison, NJ 08818 by April 20, 1990.

The selection of the recipients will be made in May by a committee of several Foundation trustees after review of all applications and personal interviews of selected candidates.

Realtors Mary M. Spano of Teaneck, NJ added that this will be the eighth year of the continuing scholarship program.

Wishes for Spring '90

A Special Section from Forbes Newspapers

Foundation warms afflicted children, families

Each of us has the ability to make a child's wish come true. And isn't that the best wish of all?

The Make-A-Wish Foundation has fulfilled the wishes of 360 New Jersey children and is currently ac-tively working on 60 more. The Foundation focuses on providing wishes of children under 18 facing life-threatening illness. The youngsters and their families, as well as all those helping to arrange the trip or visit with a celebrity for the afflicted children, gain from the experience.

The children and their families have traveled to Disney World, cruised to Puerto Rico, and met their favorite TV stars, movie celebrities and idols in professional sports

Perhaps most important in a time that is often financially stressful, the wishes are "carefree". All expenses for the entire family, parents, brothers and sisters are covered: airline tickets, rental cars, lodging, meals, spending money, passes for attractions, film and limo service to and from the airport. They go anywhere, to see anything, or to meet anyone.

Because children and their families are assisted together and the community becomes actively involved, Make-A-Wish estimates a positive impact on over 250,000 New Jersey people each year.

Granting the fondest wishes of the state's children is the simple and

How you can enjoy fun, fashion and charity...

Forbes Newspapers, its readers, advertisers and the Make-a-Wish Foundation will come together for fun, fashion, and a little incidental fund raising at a special fashion show

Proceeds from the fashion show, which will feature men's. women's and children's wear as well as the latest in coiffure, nails and accessories, will go to the Make-A-Wish Foundation. The show, which is open to the public, will be at the Court Cafe, across from the Court House on East Main Street in Somerville, on Tuesday evening, March 27, from 7-9:30. Miss Somerset County will be among the models, and prodcompassionate purpose of the Foundation. It considers the wish of any child under the age of 18 with a life-threatening illness. It is dedicated to reaching every child who is eligible for a wish before he or she becomes too sick to enjoy it.

The ailing child and family are provided with some special memories, of joy, laughter and family togetherness which are dramatically different from the final images of hospitals, painful treatment and financial worry

During this time of heartuct samples, door prizes and coupons will be part of the festivities Seating is limited and advance purchases are recomticket mended. Tickets are $15 and are available at the Court Cafe, 18 East Main St., Somerville, Patullo's, 1 Vosseller Avenue, Bound Brook, Pitter Patter Shoes, 403 Raritan Avenue, Highland Park, Just For You, 1797 Route 27 and Women at Large, 2090 Lincoln Highway, both in Edison. wrenching turmoil for a family, a "WISH" provides a welcome respite, a time for just plain fun and family togetherness. Wishes are funded by contributions from people who read or hear about the Foundation. Also, a variety of services are donated to help make the remaining days of the children as happy as humanly pos-sible. The Make-A-Wish foundation of New Jersey relies on organizations, who historically do fund raisers, to sponsor the wishes of the children. A wish sponsor receives a picture of the child on the wish and a letter explaining what they did and how much fun they had

All requests for wishes must be submitted to the Foundation, and should include a wish letter from the child, and the name, address and phone number of the doctor. doctor is contacted by the The Foundation to discuss possible restrictions concerning the wish. A wish packet is filled out by the family and the Board of Directors votes on granting the wish when all the forms are presented. Wishes are granted as soon as possible, delayed only by medical treatment.

Make-A-Wish Foundation The counts its accomplishments in the smiling faces of the children whose wishes have been granted. The hugs and thank you letters from the children are cherished.

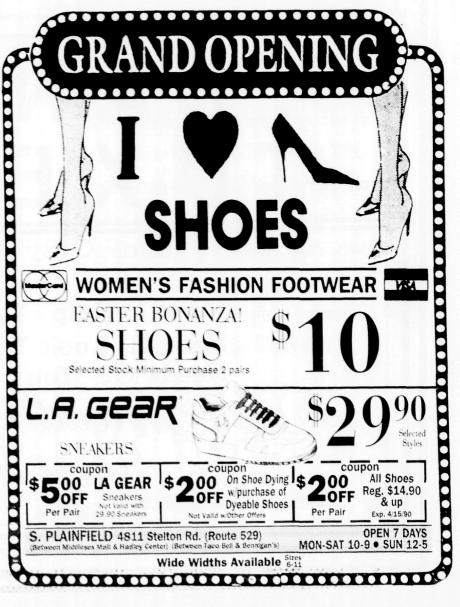

The Foundation does not practice medicine but is able to do things for the children that medicine never accomplished, like increasing their appetite and giving them the incentive to get better.

The New Jersey Chapter was founded in January 1983 by Peter J. Runfolo and has offices at 326 Morris Ave., Elizabeth, Branches in 14 New Jersey counties have been formed to monitor and grant the wishes of children in their areas. It is part of a nationwide non-profit organization of 72 chapters and 43 states

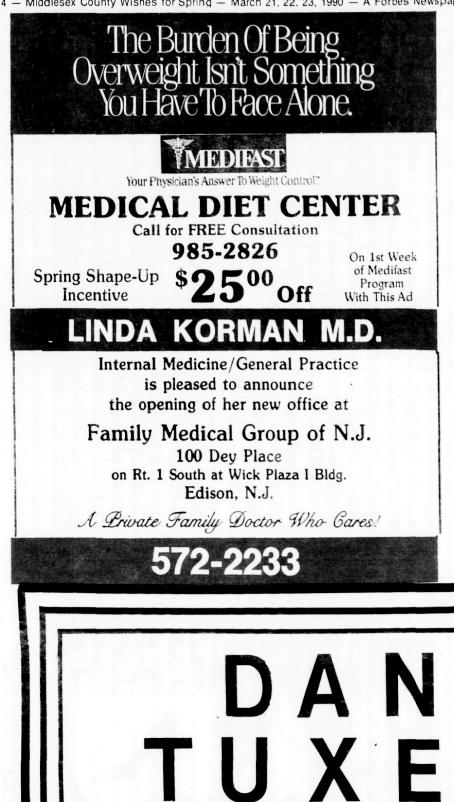

The Make-A-Wish Foundation is now the nation's largest and strongest wish-granting charity and is supported by over 6,000 volunteers.

Long sheer skirts are headed this way

Long printed sheer skirts are traveling across the country and will soon be seen on the sidewalks of Central Jersey.

The style is all the rage in California, Eileen Sweeney, buyer for Cindy J's in Somerset and Warren, found on a recent shopping trip. It's the new look there, but may be slightly modified here.

Whereas California girls wear very little beneath the sheer voile skirts, this may be "a little too risque for New Jersey," Sweeney muses. The skirts being sold here are lined and are being paired with either a lycra tank top, oversize T-shirt or oversize cotton sweater, she notes.

Lycra sportswear and dresses are also on the popularity list this spring, in oranges, tropical fruit colors and other real hot colors. And prints - printed rayons and knits, are in. "Denims are really strong," Sweeney points out, primarily in jeans. With five pockets, it's almost back to basics.

As for accessories, charm bracelets and necklaces are very popular.

They are not the heavy pieces worn years ago, she cautions. They are much lighter, made of metal and are adorned with a wide selection of charms, like hearts, teddy bears, stars and other trinkets. Girls wear as many as 20 to 25 on one necklace.

Large earrings, including shoulder dusters, which reach to the shoulder, are also a hot item this year.

An upscale line of ladies and children's clothing is available at Cindy J's, whose principal is Joanne Friedman. Catering to those from 16 to 60, the stores in Rutgers Plaza in Somerset and Pheasant Run in Warren (for ladies only) specialize in career and play clothing.

"The stores take pride in name brands," says Sweeney, citing labels bearing the names of Liz Claiborne, Carole Little, Karen Kane, Leslie Fay and Blast Activewear among them.

Rita Maier wears an Ungaro solo donna signature dress featuring the typically Ungaro soft draped V-neckline with puffed and tapered sleeves.

'90 sportswear more colorful and durable

More durable fabrics in a wide array of vivid colors are making a big splash in sportswear this year.

Cotton, which used to hold sway, has given way to newer types of materials developed in this high-tech age, like Dupont supplex nylon, which is color fast, quicker drying and very strong, according to Mike Wilbert, buyer for Efinger's Sporting Goods Co. in Bound Brook.

Neons, which were very popular last year, are very much in again this year, either as accents or in solid colors, in fuschias, magentas and other brilliant shades, he adds. "It's the strongest color palate I've seen." The surf look has slowed down, he observes.

Jams, the knee-length shorts popular for the last three or four years, "have died a quick death." They have been replaced by the widerlegged volleyball shorts, which are shorter, loose-fitting, very comfortable and allow more freedom of movement. He describes them as

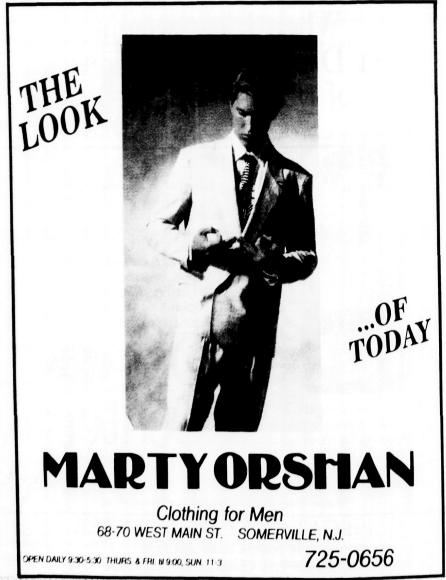

"real soft, super light and quick drying," and can be worn on the street or on the beach; they lend themselves to all types of athletic activity, including volleyball, of course

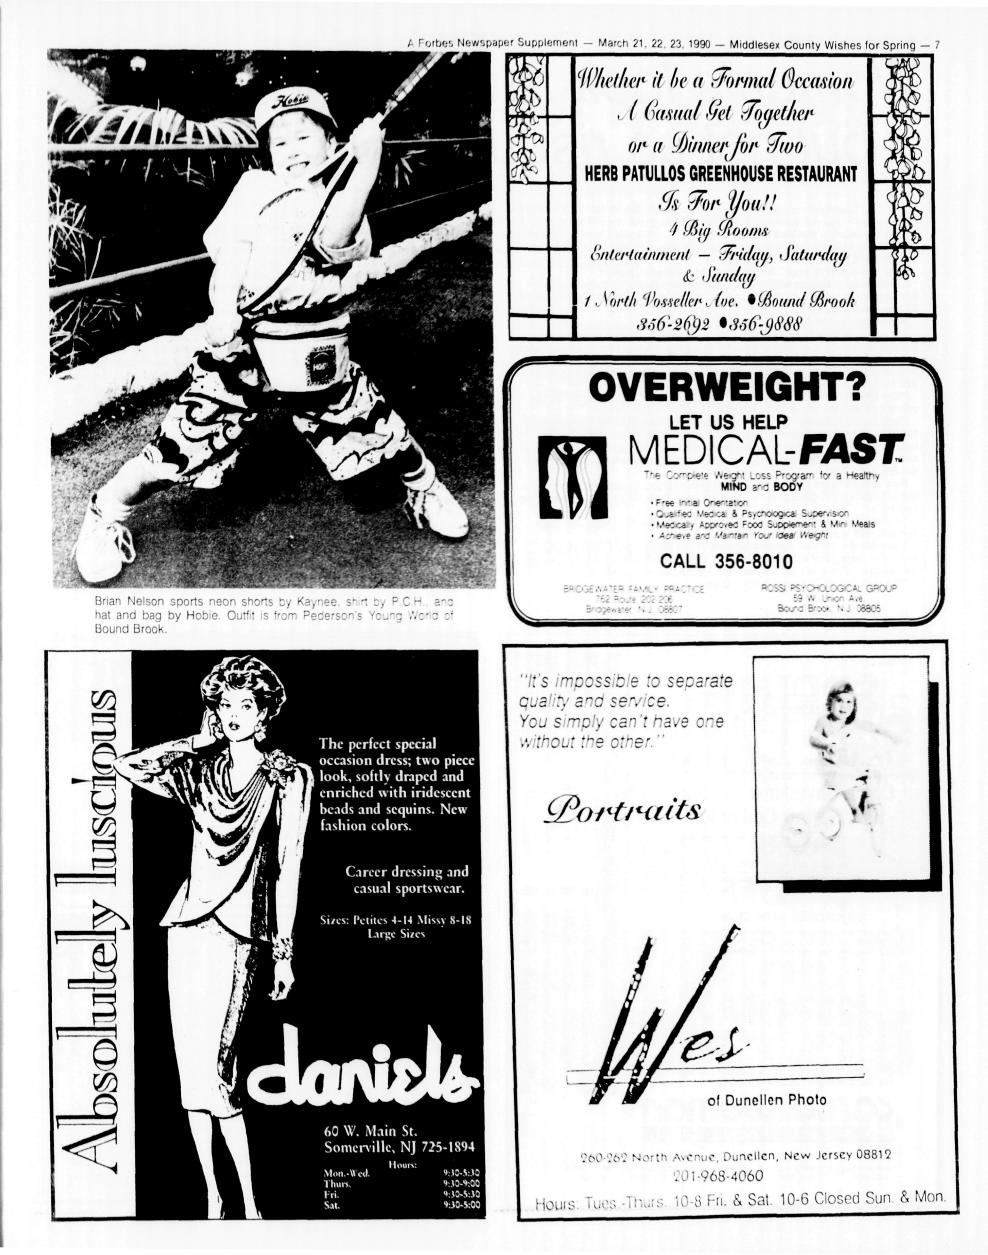

They are lined with mesh, and the pockets also have mesh linings, so that sand can filter through. "They-'re great for swimming and playing in the sand," he declares.

Of course, there are those who still buy jams and swim trunks with a lot of pizzaz, but the bulk of the market is made up of the mainstream shorts silhouette, and this year it's volleyball shorts.

They are being worn with T-shirts or shells and pullover wind shells.

"T-shirts are stronger than ever," Wilbert reports, with most coming in a white background highlighted by vivid prints. There are also novelty T-shirts and "crazy shirts" which proclaim an offbeat message. One of the hot sellers, Gorby's red lightning, displays Mikail Gorbachev's head on a bottle of vodka.

Women's look to be 'very sexy'... ...but not as risque as in Europe

Men, be aware - the look is sexy.

That's the assessment for women's fashions this year, according to Brune-Ila Saltarelli, of Euromoda in Somerville.

"The trend is very sexy," her partner, Rose Calvetti, agrees.

See-through garments introduced by couturiers in Paris, Milan and Germany have made their way across the Atlantic and are being embraced by American women.

But not in Central Jersey.

European women have no qualms about wearing a chiffon blouse with nothing underneath, or baring a breast in a garment that bares one shoulder - "half in, half out," as Saltarelli describes it. American women, however, balk at going to these extremes, and modify it by wearing a camisole, body suit or tank top underneath.

"The see-through look can be sexy," she claims, but "if women go all the way it can become cheap and clownish."

Paris is still the place for haute couture, note Saltarelli and Calvetti, who travel to Europe periodically to buy clothing. They find the French very extreme, and Italian fashions more conservative, "They go for the basics and are not as trendy," claims Calvetti. "Germans understand the American market," she adds.

How many women have the money, or the courage, to wear extreme styles, she asks parenthetically. A certain percentage, "but not in New Jersey," she concludes.

"We know our customers," says Saltarelli. "An American woman buys a garment and wants to wear it awhile."

The see-through look can also be seen in the long pleated skirts being worn this spring and summer. They hug the hips, then fall in folds. creating an illusion. "You don't actually see the leg," Saltarelli points out.

"It's very tastefully done," adds Calvetti.

Long, full skirts are very graceful and cool in the summer she notes, and they can be worn with flats. Straight short skirts worn above the knee are also popular now. "The Chanel look is very strong again," both women agree. These suits come in multi-colored tweeds, have patch pockets, gold buttons and no collar, and are usually worn with pearls and chains and chain pocketbooks.

Many career women are opting for split skirts or walking shorts with jackets for office wear, finding them more comfortable and less revealing than mini skirts, or what Calvetti prefers to call short skirts.

"They don't have to worry about crossing their legs or bending down," Sartarelli laughs. As for length, it's below the knee for split skirts and above the knee for walking shorts.

In jackets and dresses there is a more modified look, with shoulders not accentuated. Calvetti notes. Instead of the oversize pads, they're getting smaller. "Shoulder pads cover a lot of sins," she adds. They give the illusion of slimming the hips and the garment fits better.

As for colors, navy, red and wine are big for spring, and not far behind are pink, coral, taupe, apple green and white. For summer it's wheat, turquoise, brown, white and khaki green.

Animal prints are still strong for summer, she reports, as well as cotton knits for daytime wear and silk for evening.

Another material gaining in popularity is viscose, a cross between linen and silk, "a sort of poor man's linen" which Calvetti describes as "softer than linen, and not as delicate as silk." Pants made of this "fall better and don't have a stiff look," she declares.

As for pants, they are very full, she adds. For evening wear there is the tuxedo look, with fuller pants and shorter jackets, a more feminine look. Accessories are very big, both women agree. Scarves, pearls and chains (the more the better) and lots of pins are fashionable this year.

Color in jewelry extends to diamonds

Jewelry is making a colorful fashion statement. "Color is in," contends Bonnie Sovinee of Wendell's Fine Jewelry in Bound Brook. Blue, pink, purple, green — the whole gamut of colors — in precious and semi-precious stones, are the rage, for both men and women.

The old standbys — rubies, sapphires, emeralds and diamonds are still big sellers, but more and more diamond devotees want their gems in colors. Yellow, red, blue and black diamonds, while more expensive, are becoming more prevalent, observes John Kulina, who with his wife, Victoria, own Victoria's Jewelers in Manville and Belle Mead.

Also gaining wide attention are what gemologists call "exotic stones" which come in many colors. One of the most popular is kunzite, a pink stone from Africa, which is less expensive than pink diamonds, according to Kulina.

Other popular exotic stones he cites are rhodolite, a reddish color in the garnet family; iolite, a lighter blue stone with a sapphire flavor; tourmaline, a watermelon color which breaks down to red, pink and green; demantoid, a green garnet; tsaborite, a yellow green which rivals the emerald and zircon, formerly called "the poor man's diamond" and is not to be confused with cubic zirconia, he cautions.

While these stones are less expensive, "they're not exactly cheap," Sovince points out. They can range from several hundred to several thousand dollars a carat.

Colors are being mixed, too, not only in stones, but also in metals. Gold, which also comes in shades of rose and yellow, is being mixed with silver for all kinds of jewelry.

"Pearls are still a hot item," notes Kulina, but today's customers want them larger, he finds. "Those who have 6 mm pearls now want 8 mm pearls."

"Barbara Bush brought them back," declares Sovinee concerning the resurgence in the popularity of pearls. Both real and fake, double and triple strands, are being seen. Pearls are also being worn with gold chains, emulating a more classical Chanel look, she adds. Gold chains are still a standby, according to Kulina, who sees a trend toward wearing one or two thicker, more valuable pieces than many thin ones. "It's nicer to have one heavy chain than 16 small ones," he comments. Making a comeback are charm bracelets, but "the new ones are not as heavy," he claims, probably reflecting the cost factor, since gold has escalated sharply in price in the last 40 years.

For anyone who has an old, heavy charm bracelet tucked away in a drawer, now is the time to bring it out and wear it, Sovinee advises. "Everything that's old is new," she says.

Some who don't want to wear the heavier bracelets are having the charms made into pins, notes Kulina.

Coin jewelry is also very hot for young and old, Sovinee maintains. Coins are appearing in rings, bracelets, necklaces, bezels, money clips and pins, and monogrammed jewelry is coming back.

Big jewelry is also in fashion, particularly in costume jewelry. Shoulder dusters — earrings which dangle from the ear to the shoulder — are very trendy, says Sovinee, and large pins are in, as well as scatter pins of various sizes which can be grouped together.

"Jewelry is bigger, better and bolder," says Kulina. Doorknocker style earrings, which are large swinging hoops that look like doorknockers, are especially popular. "Working girls buy them for themselves for work and play," he adds. They buy two types, one more conservative for the office, and the other "flashier for when they go out in the evening."

Cuff links, a mainstay for men until the casual look in fashion took over, are now making a comeback. "Yuppies are getting more mature," quips Kulina.

In order to wear cuff links a man needs a shirt with French cuffs, and not all stores stock them. "Many specialty stores are missing the boat by not carrying them," says Sovinee. A new trend in buying patterns is now surfacing, she claims. "More and more women are buying men diamonds," and more and more women are buying diamonds and other precious gems for themselves, she observes. With more women in the workplace they can afford them, she reasons.

Color for kids: Boys in hot pink?!?!

Hot colors are bursting out all over in kids' clothes.

Toddlers, pre-teens and even infants are being clad in bright shades, according to Lisa Sherman of Pederson's Young World in Bound Brook.

"Neon pink and neon green are really hot," she claims; neon pink is the strongest color.

Mothers may find it hard to believe, but boys are opting for hot pink pants. In past years they favored brown, gray or navy, but "now ask the kids what they want and they'll say 'hot pink', "says Sherman. "No one would ever think to put a boy in hot pink," she grins.

Bright neon colors were in last year, but this year "they're washed down a little," she notes. They're calling them citrus neons. They're toned down, a little softer. In the past one type of jean was made, for boys or girls, but now there's more of a choice, she maintains. "Boys have gone from drab to incredible," she adds. "They know what they want, and mothers allow them to pick out what they what they want, and mothers allow them to pick out what they want." They love the screened shirts, shorts, garments tie-dyed, or with a logo, pants with butt prints, volleyball hats and sunglasses. They like clamdigger shorts, which go to the knee or mid-calf.

And in pants, cuffing is in; they fold up a small roll, twist it at one end and turn it under so that the pants will be tight at the ankle and the leg can bag.

Girls are getting some of the boys' looks, like pants with pockets, she notes — "the Bugle Boy look".And there are the androgynous pants, for boys or girls.

Pants for girls come with stripes and flowers, and floral touches are also being used, making the look more feminine, according to Sherman.

For Easter, however, it's traditional dresses for girls, and they come in pretty pastel florals, for infants up to girls 7-14. Sherman calls it 11the romance style," even for little ones. Girls like hairbands, chameleons (sunglasses that change color), sunglasses with neckz (colored surgical tubing attached which allows the sunglasses to hang like a necklace), macrame bracelets, painters' hats, backpacks and bike bags for summer which will hold money, chapstick or other small items.

Socks to match their outfits give them a coordinated look.

As for material, there's a lot more 100 percent cotton, observes Sherman. "Moms want cotton."

Losing weight more fashionable in spring

The pounds that have crept on over the winter months cannot be hidden very successfully when the warm weather rolls around.

Trying on a new outfit and checking it out in the dressing room mirror can be startling and depressing, and is often the motivation to go on a diet and get in shape for spring and summer.

"The benefits of getting weight off are so phenomenal," maintains Nancy J. Libro, director of Diet Center in Piscataway. In addition to being able to wear a smaller size and looking better, you'll feel better, be healthier, have a higher energy level and better self-esteem, she points out.

The question posed is exactly how to lose the weight. At one time, the majority of the population depended on starvation crash diets. But trends have changed, and more and more people are not only interested in simply losing weight, but they also want to lose it and keep it off permanently.

They want to stop the "Yo-Yo" syndrome of alternately losing and regaining weight by fad dieting, which concentrates solely upon weight reduction.

When looking at various diet plans, there are several things to consider before making a decision. First, how long has the diet been around? Fad diets usually come and go within a year. Second, does the ucts? Finally, does the diet make diet require special foods or prod- outrageous weight-loss claims? Ex-

Wholesome at-your-desk snacks

A large percentage of food products in the United States are now in single-serve or small-size convenience packs, reflecting the mobile, fast-paced lifestyles of today.

The growing number of interesting single-serve snacks and foods means you no longer need to pack carrot and celery sticks when you want a healthy and wholesome at-your-desk snack.

An apple or banana is, of course, perfect. However, sometimes you want a snack that's a bit more interesting and satisfying, but still wholesome.

cessive weight loss is often in the form of water and muscle, not fat. Before starting any diet, the Diet

Before starting any diet, the Diet Center advises people to make sure it's nutritionally sound, that it's composed of a variety of "ordinary" foods, it can be adapted to meet any special needs, it provides nutrition education and behavior modication, it includes a formalized exercise phase and it has the approval of the individual's doctor. Another important factor is a program for maintaining weight. This requires learning to incorporate eating habits which will help keep those unwaned extra pounds from creeping back on. Continued support during this phase can be extremely valuable.

Over the last 18 years Diet Center claims to have helped millions of people lose weight through its program, which instills new eating habits, is based upon sound nutrition and provides for lifelong weight maintenance. The program features a wide variety of fresh foods available at any grocery store.

Pleats in, ties out for men this spring

Men's clothes this spring are casual but dressy. That's how Tony Ettore of Marty Orshan's in Somerville views the male fashion scene. Slacks are baggy for a very relaxed fit, he notes. There's a dressier kind of look.Pleats are still in, as are high-waisted pants in rayon blend fabrics. Slacks are baggy for a very relaxed fit, he notes.

Rayon shirts in solid colors - lots of whites- as well as blacks, pink and turquoise are popular, buttoned to the top, and no tie.

Jackets, which may or may not be worn, are oversize and loose, for a casual fit. Basic colors are black, grey, solids and patterns, whites, heather and tone-on-tone floral patterns.

For young men, bright neon colors are in, particularly in beachwear. They are also into 1960-ish and Woodstock era clothing.

Ties too are much more colorful, in patterns and multi-colored stripes. Dress clothes are "very very sharp looking, very forward fashion," says Ettore. Solid colors are interspersed with a pattern, like silvery thread on white for a striped effect.

Double-breasted suits and double breasted jackets are still in, and cuffed pants are popular, he reports. Plaids are fading from the fashion scene, and

Career women shun suits; prefer dresses

Suits, the garment of choice for career women, are losing ground to dresses with jackets.

Dresses are selling very well.contends Nina Orshan of Nina and David's in Hillsborough. With jackets or blazers they are becoming more popular with working women. Navy, black and red are the predominant colors for the jackets, which can match the dress, or pick up a color if the dress is a print.

The advantage in having jackets in conservative colors is that they can be worn with several different outfits.

Money's tight out there, notes Orshan. Women want to buy something they can wear more often, and can match. As for skirt lengths, she finds women accepting shorter ones, not minis, but just above the knee. The lengths are 25 to 27 inches from the floor, depending upon the woman's height. Split skirts are another look, or choice, she adds, and they can also be worn outside the office. A split skirt, jacket and shell cotton ensemble is particularly popular.

Pleated skirts, where the pleats break at the hip, in silk or high quality polyester, are also in demand this year. Clothes have gotten very soft.Orshan sport coats come in patterns with window pane effects.

- Vests are making a comeback, he reports, but not as part of a suit. They come in black, white, silver tone-on-tone and floral patterns.
- Stonewashed and whitewashed jeans are still in demand, but they are getting lighter and lighter, he points out.
- Twenty-year-olds are more fashion conscious, Ettore observes, probably influenced by TV commercials and print advertising.

Older men opt for Levi Docker slacks, which are comfortable, pleated, a little baggy and made of 100 percent cotton in a tremendous assortment of colors, he says. Sneakers, Docksiders and casual sport shirts complete the outfit. Larger size men will find a wide selection of styles identical to those offered in smaller sizes. "There is a lot more available," says Ettore, who carries these in his Big and Tall Shop. Because they're not flattering, big bold patterns are avoided by heavier men and tall men do not choose vertical stripes.

Traditionally, "a big person is a more conservative dresser," Ettore declares.

Men are generally dressing up more, he maintains. Some prefer a suit and tie, while others opt for casual baggy outfits.

says. A woman doesn't have to look like a man any more, she adds. Pants, on the other hand, are not being worn as much by career women, she says, especially by those in high-level corporate jobs. This may be attributed to an unwritten company dress code, she speculates.

Jackets are shorter this spring, in navy and white, black and white, taupe and white, greens and reds. Color blocking, with the front white and the sleeves and back green, for example, is also popular.

Women are opting for washable silk in casual or career wear, according to Orshan. For weekend wear there are cotton separates — skirts, jackets, blazers and shorts. And this season is very nautical, she notes, with garments in red, white and blue, but soft colors, like turquoise and coral are also in demand.

While women are being extremely cautious when buying clothes, if they need replacements they won't hesitate to purchase them, and if they see something unusual or different which they don't have in their closet, they'll buy it,Orshan declares.

Consumers demand 'new' fashion goods

Newness is the word in fashion today.

That's the observation of Shep Friedman, principal in Shepard's, a fashion store catering to the entire family, located in Middlesex and the Rustic Mall in Manville.

If something being offered is pretty new and the consumer likes it, he or she will buy it, he claims. The fashion customer is not looking for bargains, knowing that the item may not be available if he or she waits for a markdown. "The idea in merchandising today is to present something new to the public constantly," he declares. And the customer is happier when confronted with new fashions, fabrics and colors.

As these items are snapped up by the buying public a greater turnover in stock results, and the store can carry a more diversified inventory.

Friedman's Manville store, recently enlarged and remodeled, can carry a bigger inventory as well, in clothing and accessories for ladies, men, girls, boys, toddlers and infants, also fashion linens and bath items. His Middlesex store, which is three times larger, also carries Yes, Fido, you're included...

Fashion is going to the dogs.

Clothes and accessories abound for man's best friend, who can look sharp, and keep warm in sweaters, coats, bandanas, and even boots to keep paws dry in wet weather.

Even the ever-popular T-shirt dog owners wear are now available in all sizes, to fit Yorkshire terriers to Saint Bernards - and cats, too. They even bear messages.

Terri Sica, of Terri's Doggie Hut in Bound Brook, offers examples of some T-shirts that the best-dressed dogs will be wearing and proclaiming: Hot Dog, Frankly Rover, I don't give a woof, Foxy Doggy and My arthritis is killing me,

They can even wear matching collars and leads, in all colors, many bedecked with jewels.

And it can be reasonably assumed that before donning their apparel they are groomed. No shaggy dogs here. Whether purebreds or mongrels, owners make sure their dogs are clipped regularly.

"All different breeds have different clips," Sica points out. A cocker spaniel would get a different clip than, say, an Airedale.

It's easy to see how the attention lavished on these family pets earns them the right to put on the dog.

housewares, toys and sporting goods.

Friedman observes that more and more children are selecting their clothing. "In days of yore mothers were buying all the clothing," he notes. The kids today are more fashion conscious and adopt new styles. Neon colors are most popular, also baggy pants and oversize shirts. The kids are not afraid to mix prints with solids and prints on prints. "Even boys are into prints," he says.

And toddlers are picking up on the bright colors. "Colors and prints are where it's at," Friedman notes.

Infant wear is still more traditional, he finds. Since much of it is purchased prior to the baby's birth, mints, yellows and neutral colors predominate. After the birth come the pinks and blues.

What's the story on shoes?

Neon shoes with lots of glitz are turning kids on this spring.

Toddlers and growing children like to look down on lots of color, the brighter the better. Sneakers are de rigueur, and they can be as fancy as the wearer fancies.

Children can even paint their own designs on some models which come with fabric paint, according to Judy Schwarzberg of Pitter Patter in Highland Park. "If they create a great design they can win a pair of shoes," she adds.

And there is an assortment of doodads which can be used to personalize the sneakers. Children can decorate them with clipons, sparkles, ornaments, buttons, jewels and stones.

Sandals, which many prefer to wear in the summer, also come in hot colors and can be accessorized. For parents who don't like neon, there are colorful accessories to dress up the sneakers, to appease them and their offspring. Among these are fluorescent shoelaces, spring laces, bow biters with varied characters that "bite the bow" to keep it tied in place, and shoe boppers, which also keep shoelaces tied, notes Schwarzberg.

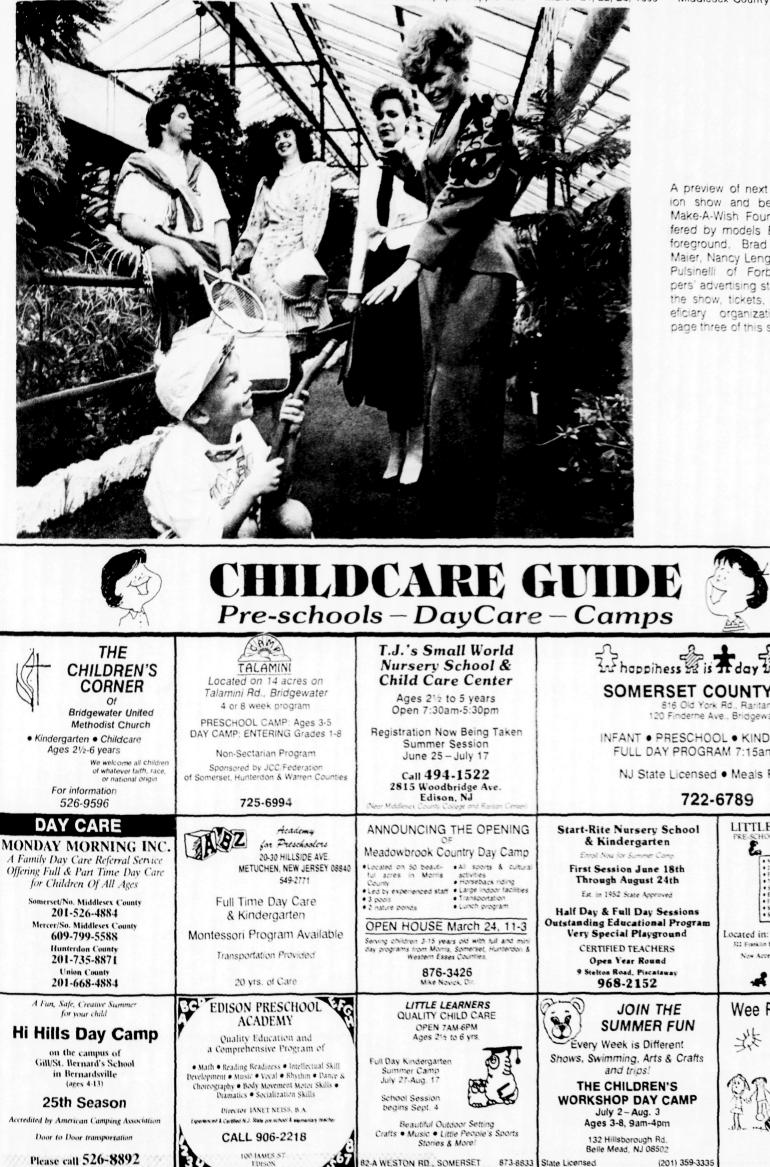

"Kids walk in and say 'Wow!' and parents say 'Yuk'," laughs Schwarzberg.

Dress-up occasions, like Easter and Passover, may call for a more sedate style, and patent leather shoes are the footwear preferred. While not as colorful as neon sneakers, they can become a bit fancier by the addition of stones, jewels or a grosgrain bow.
