An 81-year-old Belmont Avenue resident, Guro enjoys gardening and he likes tomatoes. In fact, he likes them so much that five years ago he began experimenting with ways in which he could grow his favorite kind - big and red with few seeds and lots of "meat."

And he succeeded. Guro's tomatoes won first place at the Middlesex County Fair this month. He not only displayed the tomatoes, he displayed a whole seven-foot plant on which hung the blue ribbon the whole week of the fair, he said proudly.

Guro is also known in the science world for his tomatoes. Michigan State Univer sity's Department of Horticulture recognized him last year for developing this new variety of tomato, which he calls the Guro sandwich to-

District employee is charged with forgery

By Maria Jose Serra Reporter staff

Board members voted 7-0 Tuesday night to terminate the employment of Jacqueline M. Omoletski after learning that she had forged a payroll check that belonged to the district.

Omoletski, who was the director of data processing in the district, allegedly wrote a check for $1,053.83. She was charged with forgery and theft by deception by South Plainfield police Thursday, August 16 at about 7:25 p.m.

Omoletski allegedly wrote the check on her own typewriter and signed it with the name of the district Superintendent Leonard Tobias, reading from a police re-

According to Tobias, the report also states that Omoletski cashed the check at the First National Bank on Plainfield Avenue.

A monthly revision of the books revealed a discrepancy in that a check had not been stamped by the custodian of school monies, Tobias explained.

School administrator Dominic Carrea notified Tobias of the discrepancy and then notified the police, who arrested and charged Omoletski with forgery and theft by deception.

"I was absolutely shocked," said custodian of school monies, said Tobias, especially since Omoletski had been an employee of the district since October 1978.

"I was floored," said Board President Bruce Papkin, referring to his reaction when he found out about the charges against Om-oletski. "I was demoralized that people in our staff would get involved in unsavory things.

'We never had an incident like this before, to our knowledge," he added, "and I hope this was just an aberration.'

The board is investigating whether Omoletski had attempted forgeries in the past, Papkin said.

Council supports water bill

By Maria Jose Serra and Kathy Hall

Under a proposed state plan, residents could pay $3.65 more per year to ensure clean drinking water for their children in the next century.

Last Thursday, Borough Council members voted 3 to 1 to pass a resolution supporting Assembly Bill 3300, which gives suggestions for raising funds for water conserthe remaining 25 percent.

According to Assemblyman Robert Smith of Piscataway, who introduced the bill to the New Jersey State Assembly, the cost can be subsidized by raising the water bill by one penny per one hundred gallons used.

"They want clean water for themselves and their children and they're willing to pay for it," Smith said, referring to area residents he had spoken to about the proposed water rate hike.

"That will raise $100,000,000 per year," he added. "It's a painless way to raise money.'

But Borough Council president Michael Woskey was skeptical when he cast the only opposing

"The concern I have is that the project hasn't been finalized...I hate to see people paying for something that may not even be built," he said, adding that he wants to know the direction of the project before making any more decisions.

The United States Army Corps of Engineers has been surveying the Green Brook Subbasin of the Raritan River Basin for about three years to plan and construct flood control devices at the subhood control devices at the sub-basin and its tributaries, Noble said, and the Corps is still in the surveying and pre-construction phase of the project.

According to Noble, the basin covers 67 square miles and what form of flood control is needed at each bank depends upon the site and the terrain. Some devices that may be built are levees, detention basins, and flood walls, he added.

School custodian suspended for recycling center following drug indictment The South Plainfield Recycling

The Board of Education voted 7-0 Tuesday night to suspend another employee, Harry Caravello, without pay.

Caravello was indicted by the Somerset County Grand Jury on Monday, August 20 for conspiracy to possess a controlled dangerous substance (cocaine) and for conspiracy to distribute a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana), according to Superintendent of Schools Leonard Tobias.

If Caravello is convicted of any of the charges, his position in the school district will be forfeited, Tobias added.

Caravello had been working for the district as a custodian at the Kennedy School since 1982.

Although there have been suspicions of drug-related incidents within the school system in the past, nobody had ever been found guilty of such actions, and nothing had been proven, said Board President Bruce Papkin.

Labor Day Grand Marshall lived the history of the town

By Dave Pilla Reporter staff

"I'm very proud to receive this honor from Labor Day committee. I acknowledge it with a great deal of pleasure.

Thus spoke, Adam Phillips, the Honorary Grand Marshall for the 33rd annual Labor Day Parade, to be held here in South Plainfield on September 3rd.

At the age of 81, Phillips has seen a lot of changes in his home town of South Plainfield, where he was born On August 15, 1909 in a house on Hamilton Blvd. Among his many local experiences, Phillips had been the first boy baptized in the town's first Catholic church - Sacred Heart. He was also one of the appointed members of the committee for the founding of Our Lady of Czestochowa Church.

During his 66 years as a resident of South Plainfield, Phillips had served as captain of the fire department. He is now the oldest surviving member of the South Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association. He is also a life member of the New Jersey State Exempt Firemen's Association.

"I joined the fire company in 1929, and I remember very vividly a big fire at the Lehigh Valley railroad coaling station in 1931," Phillips said Monday, after accepting the Grand Marshall's honor from the Public Celebrations Committee. "A big building was destroyed, along with three smaller structures. We had fire departments from New Market, Plainfield and others assisting."

Phillips had served on many committees in town over the years, but he was especially proud, he said, of his role in creating the Recreation Commission.

"The younger element will remember me as the first chairman of the Recreation Commission back in the 1930s," he said, "and later as president of the commission in 1958.

Phillips also recalled his role as chairman of the local Rotary Club when, in 1945, he oversaw a fund drive to raise money for the recreation budget.

"Then, for the first time, the Borough Council inserted $5,000 into the budget as a line item for recreation," he said.

Phillips had also served South Plainfield as a Borough Councilman, from 1938 to 1947. He served a four-year term as borough tax collector and treasurer, from 1947 to 1950, and he was also president of the South Plainfield Public Li-

Mrs. Van Wienan's story hours have always been popular with the children. After 18 years of presenting delightful story hours, Alice retired this past summer.

The library has been fortunate in finding an excellent replacement for her. Connie Palmer, who assisted with the Junior Woman's Club's extremely successful story hours, will be conducting our monthly story hours. The first will be on September 5th. Please note this is a Wednesday. The story hours this coming year will be held on the first Wednesday and the third Thursday of every month. The Wednesday story hour will be given by Connie Palmer and the Thursday one by the Junior Woman's Club. Welcome aboard, Connie! Adults, here are some stories that you'll enjoy:

Control the population of newspaper machines

Newspaper vending boxes have been the subject of mild controversy from time to time, here in South Plainfield and in many other towns. When the vending boxes become numerous, someone inevitably complains that they are unsightly and unneces-

A caller to our Sound Off column this week pointed out that there are several batches of the boxes on a small area including the post office along South Plainfield Avenue, and mused that so many news dispensaries in one area cannot possibly serve freedom of the press in any meaningful way.

Back in June, the South Plainfield Borough Council considered giving the borough administrator and attorney permission to send letters to owners of newspaper vending machines found to be in violation of the local ordinance governing the placement of these boxes. The council then got bogged down in worries of possible legal consequences should they decide to get tough with ordinance violators.

Newspaper publishers usually defend their "right" to place vending machines in public places as a principle of free speech, saying that the public's access to the news must not be interfered with by government authorities.

But at some point, as vending machines find their way to every downtown street corner and every storefront, the question must be asked: how much is enough? Is freedom of the press well served if one can walk to three different boxes harboring the same paper within a minute? Doesn't a town council have the right to limit the number of metal boxes being chained to telephone poles and crowding shopping areas?

With all the stores that sell these same newspapers, why have so many vending machines standing guard on the street, in some cases right outside those very same stores?

Newspaper vendors, lighten up. There is no limit of news sources for the average citizen, even if vending machines were to disappear completely.

Motivation. It's important to have motivation. Be motivated. Have some pride and be motimotivated have...motivation.

Motivation has become a big thing in these times of big-money sports and big-money television and films and big-money politics. Take it from me; I know this is true because Frank Gifford and Larry King said so.

In sports, a team that has been recently trounced by its next opponent has "a lot of motivation" to win the second game, probably because no one wants to get trounced by anyone, or anything, on a regular basis. Get trounced too often and you become "hap-less," as in the "hapless New York Yankees.

next week's newspapers (where my column was supposed to be) is sort of motivating, don't you sup-

I once worked with a reporter named Doug who was seriously lacking in motivation. Some thought he was lazy, but I think he just wasn't able to see the big picture. He was what I call a "what

Doug, who walked slower that nay human being I've ever en-countered, was a police reporter. Police reporting is generally considered kind of a yucky job and it's usually given to the most inexperienced - or newest - reporter. It's considered a form of punishment: "So you want to be a re-porter, huh?" But Doug didn't seem to mind. Doug also didn't seem to care whether he did a good job or not. He apparently wasn't motivated to do a good job, and the city editor was never quite able to explain it all to him. One day, a report came over the police scanner that the sheriff's department was dragging a nearby lake because some poor fisherman reported seeing a dead body floating around.

Now if the authorities pluck a body from the water, this is a pretty good story, but Doug just didn't see it. "Doug, get out there right away and take a photographer with you," the city editor said.

"Why?" Doug replied. This was tactical error. Never ask any editor "Why?" Editors don't like that at all. Reporters are always supa dead body out there!"

This is where the unmotivated Doug uttered the line that became famous in the news room. It is probably still being said today:

"Ah, it's probably just a stick or omething.

Oh, it was probably just a stick. Well, in that case, forget it. We'll just run a story that says "The Sheriff's Department dragged Lake Belton yesterday after a fisherman reported seeing a dead body, but it was probably just a stick, reporter Doug said.

Needless to say, the unmotivated Doug was ordered to get his unmotivated butt down to the lake and find out what was going on. Why did he go? Well, it's quite simple, and it really bears out my point about motivation.

The city editor told the un-motivated Doug that if he didn't get down there and cover the story, he'd fire him in a heartbeat. Suddenly Doug - who had been yawning - hitched up his pants, grabbed a notebook and headed for the lake.

You see, now, he was motivated. So, in summation, it appears that we all need that ever-elusive motivation; we just have different ways of finding it. For Doug (who was fired a short time later, by the way), it was the threat of unemployment For George Bush, it's the threat of Iraq taking over the free world's main source of oil. And for me? Well...if I don't get it in gear, I might just have to fire myself. Yup. That's right. I'm fired if I don't get this column written. Some people just can't motivate themselves properly, so they have to be threatened.

Unfortunately, I don't respond to threats, so if I fire myself, I might just say "I can't fire me; I quit." And, if it comes to that, maybe I'll look up ol' Doug.

Nah, maybe not. What would be

Sound Off!

Newspaper boxes and other trash

Sound Off callers continue with a favorite theme: local eyesores.

"I want to complain about newspaper boxes in front of the post office, Drug Fair and Pasta Palace, around South Plainfield Avenue," said one caller. "It's getter to be an eyesore. South Plainfield was nice 30 years ago, but not any more. do we really need all these newspaper boxes?

Another caller responded to a comment last week about garage

"In the August 17th issue of the paper someone complained about a garage sale sign on Belmont Avenue where the police are. Why doesn't that person walk the two feet to take the sign down? The South Plainfield police are doing a fine job. They should get more

For another caller, litter in the parks is not the only environmen-

'I think people are still leaving their dogs' mess on the ground in the parks," he said. "Also, we should make the walkways wider (at Spring Lake Park) so walkers won't get hit by cyclists. And why are the sprinklers going on all over the road when it rains?'

Replying to a complaint about bad road conditions, one caller

"Durham Avenue also has to have repairs done. It's very bad, in case anybody's interested. Concerning parking regulations:

"People in town are parking beside fire hydrants on weekends, when the police aren't around. Could they paint lines or some-thing in front of the hydrants?"

And one man said the absence of parking lot lights at the high school creates a hazard for se-

"About four years ago they took the parking lights out of the lot at the school where the students park. Three years later they put in a $60,000 scoreboard and lights for girls softball. Where does this benefit senior citizens at night when the have to park in the lot?"

The Sound Off column prints telephone comments contributed by residents over the weekend. If you would like to get a comment into the column, call us at 561-9494 any time between 5 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Monday, and wait for the answering machine to pick up your call.

Is there no end to war?

By PHYLLIS V. RECKEL Gazette columnist

The possibility of war again, in our lifetime! It does not seem possible. Before the euphoria ends over the fall of Communism in Eastern Europe, raising belief of peace in our time, we are again sending troops to far-away lands.

No matter how long we live in this land which has never been attacked, we are continually confronted with knowing people near and dear to us who have been or are on foreign soil to preserve our peace.

Has it been ever thus, since men began carrying clubs?

For me, it began knowing a grandfather who, upon his return from World War I, never again went to church. No power in this universe, he believed, would allow men the ungodly dehumanizing torture of lying in filthy, foulsmelling trenches for weeks on end.

Then came World War II. Too young to understand its real meaning, I knew only the romance of receiving letters on strange paper from uncles whose faces I could hardly remember. It was years before I realized how fortunate our family was, unlike so many others, because our men had returned. Although one carried shrapnel in his body as a reminder of war all his life, and all had been changed in some way, all had survived.

My uncles were too old, my cousins and friends too young for Korea. Although the fighting stopped, the draft continued and it caught my husband, but he served in a peacetime

Phylosophies

Army working in a science laboratory in Mar-My sons were too young to serve in Viet Nam. But as the war dragged on, and they grew older, we wondered how all are lives would be affected if they were called and would not serve, or if they were called and they did serve. We, again, were the lucky ones because it was over before they were soldier-age.

That allowed us the hopeful notion that never again would we see our family and friends go to war. As our boys grew older, we became convinced of it - only to have our foolish idea blasted by a bomb in Beirut which killed the only son of good friends who was serving in a peacekeeping mission as a Marine. As parents of young men we understood the grief, felt the pain of men at war.

Yet again we allowed optimism to flare. "Never again," we said as the walls of Communism came tumbling down in Eastern Europe. "At last," we said, "peace in our time."

But this weekend was spent with a young niece, bravely facing the silence of her young man incommunicado as he awaits Army transportation to Saudi Arabia. It seems never to end. Has it been ever thus?

The pace of change quickens in summer

By BETTY HUTCHEON Gazette columnist

The children are home. After a month-long sabbatical, I have returned today to my role of mother, admittedly with some ambivalence. I suppose I never wholly surrendered the mother role, since I thought about my absent children all the time and I continued to nurture them, albeit through letters, phone calls and parcels of homemade cookies. But I didn't have to come home each night to any of my usual chores, like cooking dinner or driving someone to the mall or the movies, and I didn't have to share my space with anyone. My time was truly mine, and I discovered, there was more of it to whittle away at only as I

I enjoyed luxuriating in my solitude, in part, I think, because it was so temporary, and this ephemeral quality enhanced its value. But it was not a solitude I would want always, and I welcomed back my children with the same tail-wagging enthusiasm as the dog (who, unlike me, has sulked for a month). The house too seems to recognize the difference and the very walls seem to breath more deeply than before. Sometimes over the past month, just as

Visions and Revisions

I was closing my eyes at night, or just before easing myself out of bed in the morning, I would listen to the stillness in the house and recognize what was meant by the "sounds of silence." Now, even with everyone asleep, the house echoes with the sounds of life.

And with that return of life comes the recognition that the children have changed during their month away, more radically than they ever do, or seem to, during the months that we are together. For some reason, I am always surprised by their appearance. Becca is no longer a girl, but a young woman, and Douglas, who is still a boy, looks too much like a young man.

There are also the less visible signs of growth and maturation. Becca, who attended an academic program at a university, clashed head-on with kids whose lives were wrought by different values and mores. Her roommate was an alcoholic, certainly intent on selfdestruction, and Becca was confounded by her and the source of her intense unhappiness. In her last letter, Becca wrote, "I know that I am a strong enough person to be able to handle anything that comes along the way." Did I have that kind of recognition at 17?

And Douglas, less willing to commit to paper any such declarations of self-awareness, nonetheless earned his own badge of courage during a survival trek in the mountains of Wyoming. "Well, I survived the survival hike," he wrote. "Our group ate 2 ducks, 4 squirrels, 2 chipmunks, 4 snakes, 3 frogs, 1 grouse and 25 fish! I tasted everything but I didn't like too much of it." He didn't write that he was proud of his resourcefulness or his success in meeting the challenge of that hike, but behind every bite from that menagerie menu were some courageous gulps. I have no doubt that he too will be able to handle anything that comes along the way

The first thing we must handle, after a month of leading separate lives, is the immediate challenge to retune the rhythms of our lives together, to regain the balance so necessary for family harmony. I think all the right chords are there; we just have to start playing

'Pippin' taps the sympathy of the audience

By Kathy Hall Reporter staff

A round of applause for the South Plainfield summer Drama Workshop's 19th annual production, Pippin, directed by Greg Ciano.

The dedication and talent of this cast and crew not only brought local audiences back to 780 A.D. Rome, but told the inspiring and sometimes heartbreaking tale of Prince Pippin and the search for the meaning of Opening the show with "Magic To Do," Dawn Ciano as the Leading Player made her powerful stage presence known. Ciano, who only stepped into the role two weeks prior to the play's opening, slinked her way around the stage with effortless grace as she belted the opening number and brought out the chorus, known as The Players.

Whether drifting around the stage or presenting a major dance number, every Player's eye was on the talented dancer, who also choreographed the show.

While still enraptured by Ciano's movements, the audience absolutely fell in love with Eric Witkowski's portrayal of Pippin from the moment he walked on stage. Witkowski is a natural entertainer with a voice so expressive that he could have played the part unseen.

On stage, however, the SPHS junior is amazing, from his timing to his facial expressions. Pippin's traumas became ours as well, and when he sang about his aboveaverage capabilities ('Extraordinary'), I couldn't have agreed more.

Forever trying to please his stoic father, King Charles Charlemagne, Pippin decides that since his education is complete, he shall go to war like his barbaric brother, Lewis, who seems to be the favored son. The scene between Charles (Jonathan Wolek) and Pippin (Witkowski) was a hysterical clash of two completely unlike characters trying to communicate. Wolek's timing was as sharp as Witkowski's, so the scene flowed like a classic sitcom.

Enter Fastrada, Pippin's vamp of a mother, who doesn't seem to care about much except her sex appeal and her son Lewis. Kristen Henry's deliveries were wonderful and her whole attitude as Fastrada was side-splitting. Each time she exited, saying, "After all, I'm just an ordinary housewife, like all of you housewives out

THE CAST of 'Pippin' turned in a strong performance for the Summer Drama Workshop's 19th annua production over the weekend. The Players, above, opened the play with a magical number reminiscent of the Greek chorus style.

Traffic light planned for bad intersection

By Kathy Hall Reporter staff

Road repairs, litter baskets, and a new traffic light at Durham Avenue and New Durham Road were some of the issues addressed by the South Plainfield Borough Council last Thursday evening at their regular meeting.

Mayor Daniel Gallagher estimated that the traffic light will cost $200,000, but pointed out that the burden of this fee was to be shared by South Plainfield, Edison Township and Middlesex County. Being the smallest of these entities, the borough has the smallest part of the bill, and Gallagher said that more than $15,000 had been raised to contribute to the project.

The light is a project that was initiated by South Plainfield officials who were concerned about the safety of the Durham Avenue and New Durham Road intersection. Although they conducted a study of the area, they were unable to convince Edison that the project should be a priority.

After bringing the matter to the county's attention, the issue is getting results and the project is in full force, according to Gallagher.

In other council business, despite the absence of Councilman Michael DeNardo, the mayor also agreed to pay the bill for the controversial Christmas decorations that DeNardo championed in last Monday's meeting, although it was clear that he still opposed the

"I just hope it doesn't happen again," Gallagher said, adding that he didn't have much choice but to sign the bill, as the decorations were already ordered and budgeted as a line item under "Streets and Roads."

"I don't understand that one, either," he said. "It seems a little misleading."

"It might seem a little misleading, but I thought it was understood that the money (for the decorations) would come from Streets and Roads," said Council President Michael Woskey.

"The building should look pretty, but the money is not to repair the worn, but to buy new - is that a priority? Let's start prioritizing," Gallagher said.

As he signed the bill, Gallagher said, "We should look at these things more closely next time."

Residents of Arlington Avenue were also present at the meeting

Although he grew about 100 tomato plants last year, Guro will not sell the tomatoes, but prefers to give then away to his friends, and he and his wife eat them; they also have plenty of tomato juice for the whole year.

But tomatoes are not the only thing that Guro is experimenting with. He said he is also developing bigger cucumbers.

Guro said he came to the United States from Belgium 40 years ago and has lived in the same home ever since. Because there is often fog in Belgium, Guro said the climate in the U.S. is more conducive to growing tomatoes. Another of Guro's passions is mathematics. He enjoys working on "magical squares" which consist of rows of numbers that add up to the same number whether added vertically, horizontally, or diagonally. He has a colorful folder in which he spends time creating pages of such squares.

Preferring this to watching television or dancing, Guro said he spends most of his time working on the squares and tending his garden.

Guro also writes about history and religion for a monthly Russian magazine, "Soglasiye," based in Calif-

When a patient can visualize a problem, a deeper understanding of the condition is created in the patient's mind.

A new radiographic method of instantly displaying a dental image on a monitor screen for immediate viewing may soon do away with the conventional x-ray system as we know it.

The images can be magnified by a factor of four. The contact can be altered for more precise viewing. The images can be reversed from black to white or viewed in color. There will be a split-screen capability for comparative purposes, and a printer can provide a hand copy of the images in 10 seconds.

Through the dental office computer, these dental images could be instantly transmitted across the country for consultation purposes. And as an added bonus, the patient will receive 80% LESS radia-

Stores try to keep customers satisfied

By RICKY BAILEY Reporter Sportswriter

A middle-age couple strolls into a local sporting goods store, show-ing considerable interest in the flywheel weight and upper body development capabilities of a rather top-of-the-line exercise

Across the room stands a young lady studying a pair of indoor soccer shoes, admiring them because of the high arch. And in the corner there's a man inquiring about the proper knot to use with his fly-fishing outfit.

These individuals just make up a few of the millions of consumers that walk in and out of local sporting goods stores like Efinger's, Herman's and Dreiers.

"We are definitely servicing a more educated customer," said Gil Bubay, assistant manager at Herman's World of Sporting Goods on Route 22 in Green Bubay, who lives in South River, has been at Hermans for over two years and has had to keep up with an ever-changing consumer.

"A lot of customers know just what they need," he said. "I have to show them the things that match their needs.'

It's this kind of customer Bubay seems happy to serve.

"You have to be informed - we do a lot of training to keep up with our products. One of the motivating factors in many of the purchases is the power of the media. Although the excessive blitz of sports products has been critically viewed by many, information promoted through Consumer Digest and specific sports periodicals has kept the avid sporting goods shopper on target.

"The media gives the product a big boost," said Bubay. "It leaves an impression on the viewer."

One of the most forceful shifts in sports trends happens after major sporting events gain huge amounts of media attention like Pele coming to the U.S. to play professional soccer in the mid-1970s, or Boris Spasski and Bobby Fisher squaring off in chess, or the World Cup soccer tournament of recent weeks.

"You always have your soccer enthusiast," said Bubay, "but the World Cup coverage has sucked up a lot of new fans.

Soccer, especially among the kids, is still riding high on the influence of the heyday of the great Pele and the North American Soccer League of over a decade ago.

Al Freehauf has spent the last couple of years managing the athletic shoe department at Dreiers Sporting Goods in Watchung, where the buying trends span all sports.

"They're still buying them," said Freehauf about the Chuck Taylor Converse classic sneaker of the past several generations. "But right now they're buying Nike more than anything.'

The Nike sports brand has taken the industry by storm with a number of big-star endorsements. including those of basketball standout Michael Jordan and Bo Jackson of pro baseball-football

"People really got hooked on the the Nike shoe and it's definitely because of Michael and Bo," said Freehauf. "You could get three pairs of many other shoes for the price of one of

It's no wonder that with such a high pricetag the shoe itself has a higher status in high school class-rooms than the athlete that may be wearing them.

"A lot of people that wear the shoes don't play basketball," said Freehauf.

The basketball shoe is just one of many styles of footwear offered. Everyone from the wrestler to the mountain-climber can choose from a selection from their sport. "The best-selling shoes are the cross-trainers," said Freehauf.

"There are many people that play tennis, basketball, run, and a lot of other things, that can use a shoe like this. Now he can have one shoe instead of two or three."

One of the leaders in the specialized shoe market is a newcomer, thanks to innovative developments in plastics.

WITNESSING A much broader scale of consumer development is marketing director Tim Efinger of Efinger's Sporting Goods Bound Brook.

For generations Efinger's has serviced Central Jersey, and even beyond, and has been credited by Sports Trends magazine as being among the top 100 sporting goods stores in the country.

"The market is pretty trendy," said Efinger. "For instance, Nike. Anything that says 'Nike' sells. It's a problem for the consumer who may not know the difference between the Nike product and the same thing from someone else.

"Nike makes a good product and people are comfortable with a big brand name.'

To handle today's amateur athlete, stores must diversify and give as much variety as possible to the customer.

As the introduction of various sports come and go, the buying trends have to be anticipated with a good feel for foresight.

Since Efinger started working in the business as a teenager in the mid-1970s, the growth of the sporting goods industry, and all the accessories that come with it, has really filled the building on Route 28.

There was a time when we had a full ping-pong table and a full canoe on the floor," said Efinger. "But now there's so much stuff as the technology moves ahead that we could never do that again."

Goodwill to collect old clothing at the borough recycling center

With the cooperation of the town of South Plainfield and recycling coordinator Mary Mazepa, a blue and white Goodwill box is now available at the recycling depot on Kenneth Avenue. Residents can use the box to donate unwanted, usable clothing. Donations are picked up by Goodwill on a regular basis and handled with care.

Goodwill Industries of New Jersey, which provides evaluation, training and job placement for disabled and disadvantaged people, has been able to substantially increase donations from the public by placing drop-off boxes at recycling centers.

Passing on unwanted clothing and their subsequent sale in Goodwill Thrift Shops helps the non-profit agency provide a broad range of training programs for people who are making a real effort to become members of the competitive work force. In addition, such donations provide employment to Goodwill trainees as sorter, hangers and ticketers.

The collection site in South Plainfield is one of a growing number which Goodwill presently operates in conjunction with recycling centers in New Jersey. This joint effort between Goodwill and local communities not only helps people with disabilities in their pursuit of a higher human condition. but also helps our environment by keeping tons of clothing out of landiflls.

Red Cross needs local volunteers

The Central New Jersey Chapter of the American Red Cross is recruiting volunteers to help staff its 24-hour communications network for military personnel and their families living in local communities.

When emergencies strike military personnel or their families anywhere in the world - Death, serious illness or other urgent situations - the American Red Cross links separated families and helps facilitate emergency travel as needed.

Volunteers respond to afterhours calls and verify information from the comfort of their own homes. Duty hours are from 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. and weekends. The Central New Jersey Chapter serves most of Middlesex County and Franklin Township, and also provides 24-hour emergency response to homeless individuals and families.

The Red Cross provides training for volunteers. Area residents who can volunteer one night or Saturday or Sunday a month to help military families and homeless people cope with crises, should call the American Red Cross at 247-9100

Arts school accepting applications for various fall semester programs

The du Cret School of the Arts is accepting applications for the fall semester, which will begin September 4. The school, founded in 1926, is the oldest private art school in the state of New Jersey and offers full and part time, day and evening classes.

Majors are offered in both commercial art and fine art, and full time students can complete the program in three years. Both majors require a foundation year which includes anatomy, color theory, design, drawing, lettering and painting.

Advanced students in the commercial art program can choose courses in advertising design, layout, paste-ups, typography, illustration, textile design, package design, airbrush and photography. Classes available for the fine art student include drawing, oil painting, watercolor, silkscreen, printmaking, ceramics, stained glass, art history, life drawing, portraiture, and matting and framing

"With such a variety of classes to choose from, both day and evening, there should be something that will appeal to just about every art student, whether they are just beginning or advanced," said Frank Falotico, the school's director.

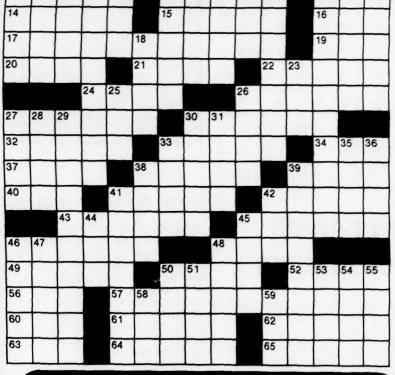

The du Cret School, located in a historic district of Plainfield, is approved by the state of New Jersey Department of Education, accredited by the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools, a member of the Private Career Schools Association of New Jersey, and a member of the International Council of Design Schools.

Additional information may be obtained by writing or calling the school at 1030 Central Avenue, Plainfield 07060; 757-7171.

of Charlie Haden's Liberation Orchestra, covering "Hey Joe"; you could easily believe in him as a love-maddened psycho killer. Here he focuses that intensity on the two big topics, desire and suffering, and delivers over-the-top performances that never quite shade off into caricature. When "The Ship Song" translates two people's joy into grandiose Trojan War language ("Come sail your ships around me/and burn your bridges down/We make a little history, baby/every time you come around"), the relentless rhythm and gentle descending vibraphone line (courtesy of bassist Mick Harvey) make the overwrought conceit believable; when "The Weeping Song" distinguishes between levels of pain ("Father, why are all the children weeping?/They are merely crying, son/O, are they merely crying, Father?/Yes, true weeping is yet to come"), the elevated language doesn't seem to walk on stilts, because Cave is putting the lines over in a voice or an "alternative rock" record; it's a full-blown art-rock record, and it lies open to all the accusations that can always be lodged against art rock. Cave and the Bad Seeds have begun working in films (including Wim Wenders' Wings of Desire), and his first novel, And the Ass Saw the Angel, will be published by Harper & Row this fall; you could say he's a bit more ambitious than a rock musician ought to be. His title song is a conscious (and agonized) inversion of the Prodigal Son guitarists' work (and these are no and Kid Congo Powers). The negguignol. #### YO LA TENGO

Fakebook (Bar/None) More accessible, though no less emotionally deep, is the fourth album by Hoboken's shape-shifting folk/punk group, the flexible but reliable Yo La Tengo. They've taken another of their characteristic radical mood swings and become a semi-acoustic quartet. Original lead guitarist Dave Schramm is back, bringing along new double bassist Al Greller from The Schramms; drummer Georgia Hubley has joined guitarist Ira Kaplan to form a wellbalanced vocal duet. In a daring twist, they've reversed the balance of covers and originals on the record: in the past they've usually tossed in a few revisions of other people's work to complement their own, but here there are just five YLT compositions, out of 16 (and two of those five are remakes, quietly intense rethinkings of "Barnaby, Hardly Working" from President Yo La Tengo and "Did I Tell You" from New Wave Hot Dogs).

Kaplan and Hubley are a happy and likable couple, a fine (if not hugely prolific) songwriting partnership, and the core of a band that's found a variety of ways to be upbeat. Their selection of material here, though, could be from a painfully lonely person's record collection: they've loaded Fakebook with some tremendous breakup songs, infidelity songs, cruelty songs, and songs of infeasible desire. The understated vomyth. He plays big plangent piano cals and Schramm's eloquent chords that often overshadow the country guitar are a perfect blend, slouches on guitars: Blixa Bargeld gnancy: the band's new sound fuses the cool harmonies of Presiative takes on The Good Son will dent Yo La Tengo's ballad "Alyda" be easy: pomp, morbidity, grand with the haunting quality of the quieter songs from Ride the Tiger, consciousness, for those who things like "The Pain of Pain" and swear by such things. It takes a "Alrock's Bells." Hubley's soft, alfew times on the turntable for the most weary lead on "What Can I

NRBQ's Joey Spampinato, is almost too sadly beautiful to bear. A cracking-voiced Kaplan takes John Cale's "Andalucia," which was pretty understated to begin with, and paints a delicate vocal pastel of wistful idealization. The Yo La vocalists are as underwhelming as Nick Cave is oper-

There are some moments of infectious happiness here, like the horny bluegrass tune "Griselda" (a genuine rural carpe diem: "I've got a jug of wine, Griselda/Why must you waste your time in sorrow?/Hold out your hand, have no fear/If we're caught I'll marry you tomorrow") and the rowdy "Emulsified," which starts off with pure grunge organ out of Sam the Sham & the Pharaohs (it's not Sam, but Schramm) and throws in the terrifically tacky Pussywillows on nasal girl-group backup vocals. But even some of the perkiest arrangements conceal subtle agonies: "Here Comes My Baby" which you'd never guess was writreally good song, animated by real sehockey - hustles along with an ostensibly joyful beat while delivering a mournful jealousy lyric, all the more affecting because of the tension between the crisp percolating texture and the "love that's South Plainfield High School. oh so fine/never to be mine."

Maybe it's just that these are the voices of people who are essentially happy enough to explore misery effectively. Maybe it's that they bring to all sorts of material (everything from The Scene Is Now's "Yellow Sarong" to Daniel Johnston's "Speeding Motorcycle"

- the speeding bike of an uncontrolled heart, an amazing image to describe the charged emotional life of the song's famously unstable composer - to an old Kinks song, "Oklahoma, U.S.A.," where Ray Davies' British perspective exoticizes a place and mindset most Americans would consider mundane) a freshness, if not innocence, that jaded ears find irresistible. The Yo La gang has taken some considerable risks and put out another winner.

Everlys: jukebox heroes still rockin'

Singing siblings play Waterloo

By WILLIAM WESTHOVEN

THE EVERLY BROTHERS
Waterloo Village
Stanhope, August 16

Sometimes getting more than you bargained for is a pleasant surprise, and sometimes it's not. Case in point — The Everly Brothers' appearance Thursday night at Waterloo Village.

It's become common among critics to chastise popular musicians, especially the more established and experienced ones, for dragging out the same tired material and arrangements tour after tour.

To their credit the Evertys

To their credit, the Everlys, who reunited in 1984 after an acrimonious 10-year split, toyed with tradition and delivered a set offering a variety of surprises.

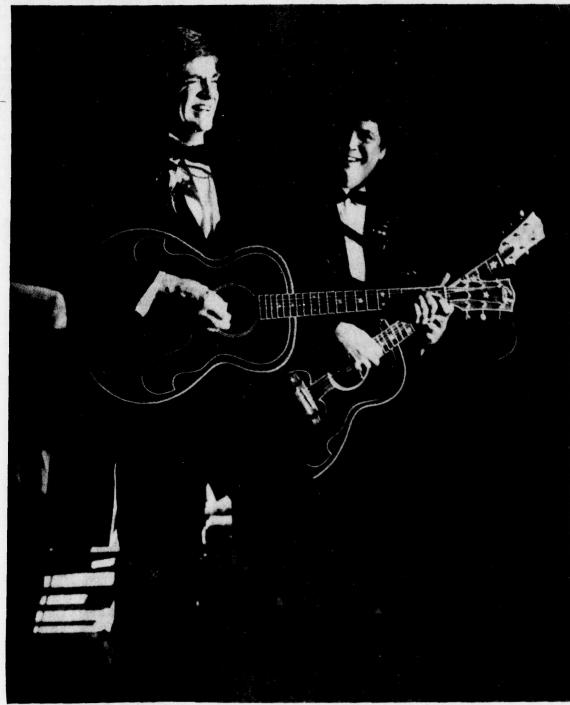

Unfortunately, their tinkering was a bit misguided, mainly because they failed to enhance the original material, perhaps a result of neglecting the formula that made these classic songs so popular in the first place.

The main reason the Everly Brothers, who charted 19 top-40 singles between 1957 and 1962 before breaking up in 1973, are charter members of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame is they made records of simplistc elegance. There were a few chords, a few hooks and harmony. Lots of harmony, a distinct synergy of melodic energy and emotion that had all the teenage girls of the period swooning.

Now a generation older and

Now a generation older and maybe a little wiser, they were unashamedly swooning again as the harmonies returned, intact, for "Bye Bye Love," "Cryin in the Rain" and another dozen-plus golden-oldie originals

Many of the numbers were delivered with new arrangements fleshed out by a splendid, five-man Nashville-oriented ensemble featuring such notables as guitarist Albert Lee, drummer Larrie Londin and pedal-steel picker Buddy Edwards. But instead of enriching the harmonies, melodies and hooks, they merely got in the way. Sometimes, in fact, the merging of brother and band was downright wierd, as was an agressive, chordy guitar introduction of "Wake up, Little Susie," by Don Everly. The effect caught many off-guard, but after a while, the surprise factor wore off and you began to wish it was just the two of Accordingly, it was the quieter moments of the set that worked best — "Crying in the Rain," "All I Have to do is Dream" and a whisper-quiet version of Mark Knopfler's "Why Worry," a song recorded by Dire Straits but penned with the Everly Brother in mind.

"Claudette," "Cathy's Clown" and "(Til) I Kissed You" were more up tempo highlights, but "Wake Up Little Susie," and especially "When Will I Be Loved," suffered from the Nashville treatment.

Another surprise was the band's jazzy solo instrumental, with Edwards' pedal steel replacing the traditional piano spotlight before later trading delicious licks with Lee. Here, the band had no blueprint to follow, so it could be judged, and favorably so, on its own merits.

It's too bad there wasn't more of a synergy between the Everlys and their backups, but fortunately, there was plenty between the brothers. Their harmonizing is one of rock and roll's legacies to the history of popular music. Don's lead vocals were strong as well, but the added effect of Phil's high-end accents, which soared into the stratosphere on "Why Worry," turned simple tunes into a symphony of aural ecstasy.

True, the Everly Brothers aren't exactly breaking new ground, but they aren't letting any grass grow under their feet, either. The nostalgia effect of the show is high, but it's nice to know these singing siblings are at least trying to come up with something new.

Changes are coming to Crossroads season

NEW BRUNSWICK — Several changes in the 1990-1991 season of the Crossroads Theatre Company have been announced by Rick Khan, the producing artistic director and co-founder of the 12-year-old African-American company

The Talented Tenth, a drama by Richard Wesley which was to have opened the season Thursday, Sept. 6, has been postponed. The upcoming season will open instead on Oct. 4 with The Beautiful LaSalles, a drama by Michael Dinwiddie which originally was to have been the season's second production.

As previously planned, The Beautiful LaSalles will be followed by Staggerlee — A Mardi Gras Musical Fable by Vernel Bagneris and Allen Toussaint, Nov. 23; Buses by Denise Nicholas, Jan. 24; Genesis 1991: A Celebration of New Voices at Crossroads, March 13; and the premiere of the Sangoma project, April 18.

A sixth production will be presented by Crossroads at the State Theatre on seven dates between March 20 and April 7. The production will be announced at a

In announcing the changes, Khan cited the impact of a two-month delay in the announcement of grants by the New Jersey State Council on the Arts; the announcement was originally scheduled for July but has been post-poned until Sept. 18. Last year, funding from the council accounted for 33 percent of Crossroads' $1.8 million budget.

The Talented Tenth has been rescheduled for the 1991-1992 season, when Crossroads is scheduled to move into a new theatre under construction on Livingston Avenue

Subscribers will be notified of the changes through the mail. Anyone wishing further information about subscriptions or single tickets may contact Garry Johnson at 249-5581.

All ticket prices and performance schedules will remain the same except for the production at the State Theatre.

Two records for the not-so-light-at-heart

It's late summer and you're having a tremendous time, hitting the highways and the parks and the beach (not too much hospital dreck washing up this year) and not worrying overmuch about your work or your studies. This is the one time of the year when most of our state really does approach its advertised condition, that of a garden; it's a secret well kept from the rest of the country, and it's a delight. Manhattan in August is uninhabitable, which makes you doubly glad you're living out here and not in Manhattan. Best of all, you're in the thick of a memorable summer romance, the kind that makes you feel more than twice as alive, the kind Stones songs get written about and beer commercials get filmed around. Life is peaking.

Remember, in between barbecue parties, or perhaps in the middle of one, that most romances, over time, turn extremely sour. The odds are that the happiness you're now savoring will be replaced by a sense of betrayal, regret over wrong things said, boredom, outright aversion, mirror-shattering guilt, or some other variety of unspeakable sadness. There's a chance this may not happen to you, but figures don't billie: it probably will. Just thought I'd share this with you, just in case.

Here are two very different, very intriguing summer releases by performers who clearly know their way around unspeakable sadness.

NICK CAVE & THE BAD SEEDS

The Good Son (Mute/Enigma) Back when he was leading The Birthday Party, one of the harshest punk-noir bands ever to exist, you could have been laughed out of the Lower East Side for suggesting that Nick Cave would eventually make an album with a prominent string section and a rich melodic texture. This is the guy who, working with raucous guitarist Rowland Howard and occasional collaborations with the likes of Lydia Lunch, created noisemusic that could make Pere Ubu sound like Perry Como. And now he's crooning?

BLACK PLASTIC

BILL MILLARD

Yep, it's true. The Australian-born, Berlin-based Cave has developed a raw, deep, resonant baritone voice that suggests Jim Morrison with a brain. His seasoned and versatile band, the Bad Seeds, is experimenting with languid rhythms, Brazilian lushness, and vibraphones. Punk-noir purists will hate it. Anyone whose taste in emotional excesses runs strictly toward wrath will hate it. Your Fearless Reporter, having gotten around the initial bafflement, suggests there's a good chance you'll love it. There are things here that are very hard to stop listening to.

Most of The Good Son was written and recorded in Sao Paolo. Though it doesn't show any obvious signs of Brazilianizing - no noble-savage percussion, no chords out of "The Girl from Ipanema" - it conveys a mood that's probably possible only in Brazil and places like it: an un-embarrassed willingness to put one's heart on the line, a shameless outpouring of direct grief and love having nothing to do with the kinds of hip ironies that life in the Northern Hemisphere seems to require. From the swirling violins of the opening "Foi Na Cruz" through the multiple anguish anthems (check the titles: "Sorrow's Child," "The Weeping Song," "Lament"; no happy campers admitted here) to the closing "Lucy," which presents Romantic (not just romantic) desire with nearly religious intensity, this album refuses to understate anything. Along with "The Weeping Song" there's a "Ship Song," a "Hammer Song" and a tremendous, rollicking gospel "Witness Song." The implication is that Cave's working with emotions so basic that they don't need (or would be compromised by) overly thought-out titles.

Cave's voice can scare you to death. One of the high points of last year's underrated music show Night Music — say what you will about David Sanborn being pure vanilla, but they booked some serious people — was Cave in front

Violinist From Japan will make N.J. Debut

Performing next week at Arts Center

HOLMDEL — The worldrenowned violin prodigy Midori will make her New Jersey debut Thursday, Aug. 30, in a performance of Brahms' Violin Concerto with the New Jersey Symphony

The performance is at 8:30 p.m. in the Garden State Arts Center, Parkway Exit 116, Holmdel. Besides the Brahms concerto, the NJSO will perform two works of Dvorak, the Carnival overture and the New World Symphony No. 9 in D major.

Midori, who is 18 years old, already has been heralded throughout the world as one of the great soloists of the late 20th century. Since her debut at 11 with the New York Philharmonic, she has performed on the major stages of North America, Europe, the Far East and her native Japan.

Her recordings have been issued by CBS Masterworks and by Philips.

Conducting the NJSO will be Zdenek Macal, the Czech-born music director of the Milwaukee Symphony. He is a frequent guest conductor with major orchestras in North America and Europe, and previously conducted the NJSO in Berlioz' Symphonie fantastique.

Tickets for the Aug. 30 concert are available at $27.50 from the NJSO box office, 624-8203 or (800) ALLEGRO.

Little Feat step out Sunday

STANHOPE — The popular rock and roll band Little Feat will combine with singer/songwriter John Hiatt August 25 at the Waterloo Village field in what promises to be one of the better double-bills of the entire summer.

Little Feat, whose enthusiastic ensemble work is influenced by a variety of American rhythms, recorded nine albums during an 11-year period that ended with a breakup in 1979. They re-united in 1985.

John Hiatt is a gifted songcrafter and performer who penned Bonnie Raitt's recent Grammy-winning single "Thing Called Love."

Tickets are $20 in advance and $25 the day of the show. They are available at the Waterloo Box Office (347-4700) or by calling TicketMaster at 507-8900.

Other upcoming shows include Anne Murray on August 22 ($30), Peter, Paul and Mary on August 23 ($22.50), Chicago on August 29 ($20 in advance, $25 day of show) and the Allman Brothers with special guest Blues Traveler on August 30 ($20, $25).

LITTLE FEAT will play songs from their latest album, Representing the Mambo, and other hits from their 20-year association when they perform at the Waterloo Village field on Sunday. John Hiatt will open.

64 Somerset St. North Plainfield 756-7310

CONCA D'ORO RESTAURANT SOMERSET STREET NORTH PLAINFIELD, N.J. 201-756-7310

I first had the pleasure of dining at the Conca D'Oro Restaurant about 15 years about when it was on Front Street in Plainfield. The occasion was a gathering of friends of my husband and their wives. It was probably the first Italian restaurant that my husband ever went to. His feelings were that no one could cook Italian as well as his mother and grandmother

Well, 15 years ago he was pleasantly surprised, and at subsequent evenings after, thoroughly pleased. And now, maybe 8 years since we last ate there, as pleased as ever!

The move to Somerset Street (January, 1989) is just a few blocks from the original site. The present site is much larger with more off street parking. The menu has changed from what I can remember, the prices seem lower. Other then that, the food is still good and the service is excellent. Why change something that has been successful for 25 years? The owners, Lou and Salavatore Terraglia, assisted by Lou's wife

Charlene who does hostess duties, look too young to be in business that long. But they have, and they do what they do best. And what they do best is own an Italian restaurant that serves good food, in a pleasant atmosphere, and at reasonable prices.

The interior is paneling with an intersperse of painted walls, and a large picture window in the front. Table settings consist of a pale yellow table cloth with small lights on each table. In the background live piano music can be heard coming from the lounge. The planist, Buddy Page, can be heard Thursday through Sunday. We were informed that Buddy could probably play any tune you requested.

There are winding steps leading to the upstairs room. This room can seat from 125 to 150 people for banquets, parties and weddings.

Conca D'Oro's menu is large, with over 75 items including appetizers, soups, salads and entrees. Add to this at least 18 appetizers and 5 entree specials, and you'll realize that their menu is one of the largest and most diversified in the area. Some of the more interesting items on the menu are: escarole soup ($3.25), broccoli raab, garlic & oil ($7.95), pasta with procuitto ($10.95), and chicken with onion, lemon sauce and vinegar Prices for pasta dishes range from $6.50 for tomato sauce to $12.50 for eggplant rollatine with ricotta cheese. Veal entrees, eight in all, average $14.00, chicken entrees $13.00, steaks and chops for $13.25 to $18.50 for ilet mignon and lobster tail. There are also fourteen seafood entrees a prices from $12.00 to $20.50 for zuppa di pesce alla genovese. All meat and seafood entrees are served with a salad and spaghetti Each table is treated to good Italian bread from a Bayonne bakery. The bread is baked the old fashion way, in a wood burning oven. My husband and I shared one of the appetizer specials, fried Italian peppers and fresh mozzarella ($7.95). This was served in a large platter and gamished with onions, tomatoes and fresh basil. What a delightful treat this was! The fresh basil added a nice touch to the overall taste. My husband also ordered a bowl of escarole soup ($3.25). This is an item you don't find on too many menus. And, since it is one of his favorites, he couldn't resist. The soup consisted of escarole, and bits of chicekn and carrots in a good stock. For entrees we chose veal marsala ($13.25), from the regular menu, and quality, quite tender, and served with a tasty marsala wine sauce with The stuffed calamari, two large pieces, served in a huge platter with mussels and pasta in a white sauce was more than I could ever eat. It was stuffed calamari, from the special menu ($14.95). The veal was of good good, in fact better than good. It you like calamari, the stuffing consist of pieces of it, then I receommend you try this. For dessert, my husband could not resist ordering Conca D'Oro's homemade tiramisu. No matter how filled you may be, this light dessert made with imported mascarpone cheese, eggs, brandy and cocoa pow-der, and served in a pudding dish, is the perfect finale for any good meal. If you have never been to the old Conca D'Oro on Front Street in Plainfield then I suggest you hurry to the new one in North Plainfield to sample good Italian cooking of items that you won't find in most restau-

unclear to kids (of all ages)

Children can't always tell the good from the bad when it comes to what they eat, as evidenced by three out of ten students believing that french fries are as nutritious as a baked potato. This is just one finding from a landmark survey of 10,000 fourth and fifth graders nationwide about nutrition.

Most experts now agree that proper nutrition in childhood can greatly influ-ence later eating habits. The Mott's Food For Thought Survey was designed to determine what youngsters know about good eating habits, espe-cially in regard to cholesterol, saturated fat and sodium, which have all been linked in some way to an increased risk of heart disease.

"The survey results indicate that children have a basic knowledge of nutrition," says Frank DeLeo, vice president of marketing for Mott's USA. "However, additional education is needed to help youngsters use this knowledge to make the right food and beverage choices."

Good and bad eating habits

Kids do seem to know the difference between good and bad eating habits. They know that:

Vitamins don't make up for a junk food diet (82 percent);

· Eating a small breakfast, medium lunch and large dinner is not ideal (60 percent);

· Skipping breakfast and making it up at lunch is not okay (87 percent);

• Eating only one meal a day is not the best way to lose weight (76 percent).

Cholesterol, fat and sodium

But, when the youngsters were asked about cholesterol and sodium, they were better able to select the correct definitions than identify foods in which they are found.

Two-thirds of the students were able to identify cholesterol in simple terms "something that can build up in arteries and veins," and nearly the same amount correctly identified sodium as "a needed mineral that can cause high blood pressure in some people if they consume too much.

However, less than 40 percent of the students are aware that chicken has less cholesterol and fat than a hamburger, sirloin steak or spare ribs.

And, less than 25 percent identified American cheese as having a higher sodium content than chicken, eggs and spinach. The students are most confused about saturated fat. Only about onethird are aware that saturated fats are found in meat, cheese and whole milk and can increase cholesterol levels. Nearly as many students incorrectly think saturated fat is "the part of fat that makes you gain weight."

Common foods: Very healthy, okay or not so good

When asked to judge common foods "very healthy," "okay" or "not so good," the children are on target with foods that are obviously healthy and those that are considered junk foods. However, they miss the mark when it comes to those foods that are between the extremes.

For example, they are aware that broccoli (82 percent), apple sauce (81 percent) and low fat yogurt with fruit (74 percent) are "very healthy," and that chocolate chip granola bars (64 percent), chocolate pudding (57 percent) and cola (63 percent) are "not so good."

But, confusion arises when the students are asked about foods with nutritional values that are less obvious. One out of every three students says that an English muffin with cream cheese is 'very healthy," and more than half fat and sodium.

Fruits and vegetables think hot dogs are "okay" or "very healthy." Both, in fact, are loaded with equally nutritious, even though fruit artificial ingredients.

***************

When it comes to fruits and vegetables, the youngsters already know these are as good for them as mom has always said. Most children under-stand that fruits and vegetables are a great source of vitamins (86 percent) and are low in calories (59 percent). Fortunately, most children (86 percent) haven't been fooled into believing that processed fruit rolls are as healthy as apples, bananas and oranges. Many of the processed fruit snacks that are popular among kids today contain many artificial ingredients and little fruit. However, the students' knowledge is not as good when it comes to understanding the difference between fruit drinks and pure fruit juice. One out of drinks are diluted with water, usually contain added sugar and often have

SESCRETARION (STORY)

TWENTY LUCKY CHILDREN were winners of a Hush Puppies "Bond," representing a $10,000 College CD at the First Children's Bank.

Special CDs offer tuition savings plan

returning to elementary or high school, some children have their thoughts only on seeing friends and favorite teachers and beginning new classes.

Other children—and their parents and relatives-have their focus on the future, on the day these "babies" will be entering college. Smart parents—and kids, too—know better than to wait until applying to colleges to address the financial need to support application fees, tuition, and expenses.

"These smart planners are buying College CDs," notes Georgette Bennett, Senior Vice President of the First New York Bank for Business. This Bank's youngest branch. The First Children's Bank, is located in the world famous toy store, FAO Schwarz. 'We also offer kids their own checking and savings accounts at The First Children's Bank, but most popular are our College CDs which account for more than 80 per ant of their deposits.

Years ago, when kids talked about money and savings, they meant their allowance and a piggy bank—until perhaps junior high school years. Not so today. Money management is a part of our consumer life which children have to understand at an early age or

Our Children's Bank was developed almost two years ago as a community service to educate children about money and banking, and teach them fiscal responsibility through hands-on experience We also teach children the joys of giving money—to worthy charities. When their CDs reach $10,000, we make a donation to a charity of their choice.

Because the foundation of The First Children's Bank is education, it was proud to have been chosen last year as the depository for the 1st Annual National College Sweepstakes for Higher Education, sponsored by Hush Puppies Boys and Girlswear and Hush Puppies Children's Footwear. Entering was easy. Entry forms were available in children's apparel and shoe departments of participating stores nationwide. An independent judging organization drew the names of 20 winners, eight years old and younger. When the children turn 18, each of their Hush Puppies College CDs will have matured to

Don't spoil children; say 'no', MD says

One of the most difficult things for parents to do is say no. When children are small, it seems easy enough to say no when they reach for a hot stove or lean precariously across an open window sill. But when they want the material plea-sures other children seem to have—toys, trips, television sets-setting limits becomes more difficult indeed.

It may seem innocent enough, giving children whatever they want if one can afford it. Allowing them unlimited freedom to go where they want, stay out as late as they choose, keep whatever com-pany they prefer, may on the surface pass for giving them independence. More often, however, it reflects the parents' fear of confrontation, their inability to communicate, and their assumption that denying their children will compromise the development of self-esteem

A cold or not?

It's allergy alert time

Children with never-ending "colds" —chronic runny noses, itchy eyes and croupy coughs—may, in fact, have allergies. Children's allergies are sometimes confused with colds because youngsters are not familiar with allergies and their symptoms and, therefore, cannot express their discomfort to parents or school nurses.

According to recent reports by aller-gy specialists and related foundations, more than 20 million U.S. children suffer from allergies. Among children ages 6-15, sneezing, itchy eyes and runny noses account for 130 million lost school days. It is important that parents learn about the tell-tale allergy signs and discuss the child's symptoms with a family doctor or allergy specialist.

The following chart can help parents to distinguish the symptoms that signal possible allergies from those that are probably a cold.

In addition, "Welcome To The Allergy Neighborhood" is an eight page coloring book that helps children understand allergies, their triggers and their treatment.

Children are welcomed to the aller-gy neighborhood by big, bold letters describing allergies. Then, as they journey down the street, into friends' backyards and homes, they are asked to color in the items (such as grasses, trees, feather pillows and stuffed animals) that might make them sneeze.

Once the children understand allergies and their causes, they visit their friendly allergy specialist who exam-ines them for allergies and prescribes medication to make them feel better.

The enjoyable, educational "visit" to the allergy neighborhood ends with a game of baseball and the important message that children with allergies are as healthy and active as their friends.
"Welcome To The Alle

Allergy Neighborhood" is available, free, as a public service from Nasalcrom, the prescription allergy blocker. Call the Allergy Information Center and Hotline, 1-800-727-5400 to order your copy.

Home is where A's are @Almost one third of our nation's ninth graders will drop out of school before graduation, reports clinical psychologist Dr. Ruth Peters, based upon a recent U.S. Department of Education Study.

"That's millions of kids—and because they lack study skills, they will never reach their full potential," says Peters in her new book, Who's In Charge? A Positive Parenting Approach To Disciplining Children.

The Charge? A Postave Farenting Approach To Disciplining Children.

"Don't depend upon the teacher or the school to teach your child how to study," cautions Peters. "It's up to parents to help their child develop the technique and attitude necessary to successfully achieve in school."

Peters' practical, straight-forward book trains parents how to successfully teach their youngsters effective study skills beginning in kindergarten. In the past four years, Peters' clients have raised their grade point averages just over two points—that's D's rising to B's, and C's to A's. "The impact that success has upon children's self-esteem is tremendous—I wish all parents could give their child the opportunity to succeed through strong study techniques."

Who's In Charge? is available in book stores for $12.50, or for added convenience can be ordered directly from the publisher, Lindsay Press, Inc., by calling their toll-free order number: 1-800-438-1242.

Youth are backers of recycling

Today's generation of college students, often maligned as materialistic and socially disconnected, are actually deeply concerned about the environment, with 95 percent agreeing that Congress should pass tougher laws to protect the environment, and 94 percent willing to pay more for products that are environmentally safe, according to an opinion survey commissioned by the National Wildlife Federation (NWF).

The survey was conducted last year by Hughes Research Corp., a national research firm based in Rockville, MD. Five hundred undergraduate students between 17 and 24 years of age were surveyed. All were enrolled in a four-year college or university. Approximately one-half were male and one-half were female.

Other key questions of the survey revealed strong sentiments on behalf of environmental quality:

•Nearly 75 percent believe that recycling of newspapers, glass, and cans should be required by law in all communities.

•While 66 percent believe that industry today is more concerned about environmental protection than it was five years ago, 76 percent believe that industry influences government to pass less effective environmental protection laws. And students take their environmental concerns into the voting booth with more than 70 percent agreeing that environmental protection is important in electoral decisions.

'Pop' for nutrition, savings

If you've got college students who love popcorn, a popcorn popper should top your list of back-to-school sup-

The Stir Crazy* popper from The West Bend Company is elite when it comes to poppers; it has been awarded the Popcorn Institute's Seal of Quality Performance.

The popper is similar to movie theatre poppers; a motorized rod stirs kernels as they heat. So, you get more pop using less oil. Other amenities include a 6-quart cover that flips to become a serving bowl and well that melts butter as the popper heats.

More importantly, a three cup serving of Stir Crazy popcorn costs only about 11 cents, great for college stu-dents short of cash. And, it has only 133 calories compared to an average of 145 calories for microwave brands and 426 for potato chips.

It's also very convenient. Here's a delicious idea for students pressed for time: Pop a large batch of popcorn and store it in a large plastic container with an air-tight lid. Before class, fill a zip-lock bag with popcorn and place it in your backpack. It's lightweight, easy to carry, and best of all, convenient whenever a hunger pang strikes.

The following innovative, easy-to-make recipes from the book, For opcorn Lovers Only, by Dianne Pfeifer, are guaranteed to add pizzazz to your popcorn.

It's head-to-toe health check time

And for many parents throughout the United States, it's time to get their children off on the right foot.

In pursuit of President Bush's goal of "Building a Better America," an army of about 46 million kids will be attending classes-17 percent for the first time, in pre-kindergarten, kindergarten, and the first grade.

Foremost among the pre-school pri-orities for parents is the need to get their children properly immunized. The first step is to contact the local health department for immunization schedules regarding the required vaccinations-especially DTP (diptheria, tetanus, and pertussis) and polio, both of which require a series of doses

The importance of maintaining full immunization is as great today as it ever was, according to Kenneth Anderson, a public health advisor at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. He warns that some children's diseases, particularly measles, are on the increase.

Of course, preparation also includes such varied chores as purchasing school supplies and making arrangements for car pools

Not to be overlooked is the high-priority item of a wardrobe. No easy task, clothing shopping requires many hours to get the proper sizes and accessories. Although Johnny and Susic are not

Facts, myths

Poring over teen pores

Acne is the bane of many young peoples' lives and the myths surrounding the condition are endless. Well-intentioned advice from school-friends and parents can inflame already irritated skin. Teens who are desperately seeking that "miracle cure" often end up needlessly aggravating the situation. To clear up all the confusion, the Neutrogena Skincare Institute has compiled a list of common misconceptions together with the real facts about acne.

Myth: Eating candy causes pimples.
Fact: It is rare that high-sugar or

Fact: It is rare that high-sugar or high-fat diets are related to skin flareups. That doesn't mean, however, that diet doesn't affect your skin. A wellbalanced diet provides the proper ing it healthy.

Myth: Squeezing pimples is a quick method to get rid of them.

Fact: Just the opposite is true. By squeezing, you break down the protective cell walls of the pore, causing inflammation and infection to the surrounding tissue, which could lead to permanent scarring.

Myth: The more you cleanse your face, the better chance you'll have of clearing up your acne.

Fact: Aggressive over-cleansing can aggravate acne problems and cause irritation so that your face may not be able to tolerate treatment medications. Instead, wash only twice a day with a mild soap such as Neutrogena Cleansing Bar For Acne-Prone Skin. This specially formulated soap is non-comedogenic, so it rinses away completely, never clogging the pores.

ging the pores.

Myth: Using an alcohol-based toner provides extra deep facial cleansing.

Fact: The term "deep cleansing" is in itself a myth. Cleansing products only affect skin's outer layer. To keep skin clean, dermatologists recommend cleansing two or three times daily with an oil dissolving, non-medicated soap that leaves nothing behind to interfere with the benefits of prescribed or brand name acne treatments.

Myth: To really blitz the zits, you have to apply a medicated lotion first

FACE THE FACTS ABOUT ACNE: The Neutrogena Skincare Institute offers expert advice on caring for acne-prone skin.

Fact: Take heart! You don't have to endure an unpleasant smelling medicated preparation to combat acne all day long. Instead, after cleansing skin, apply an acne mask to the affected area. Leave on for 15 to 20 minutes, then rinse off. One to try: Neutrogena Acne Mask which com-of a clay base.

Myth: Skin with acne should never be moisturized. It aggravates the situation even more.

ation even more.

Fact: Skin over-dried by modern acne treatments such as Retin-A, Accutane and benzoyl peroxide needs a light water-based moisturizer. Apply it only to dry areas and be sure it's non-comedogenic.

Myth: The burning, tightness and stinging you experience with your toner means it's "working."

Fact: In fact, the burning sensation indicates that you are aggravating an already bad situation, allowing acne to become even more irritated. Select an alcohol-free antiseptic. The one made by Neutrogena provides up to six hours of antibacterial action and removes excess oil without the "burn."

Myth: Foundation makeup is out of the question for acne sufferers. It can irritate and worsen pimple-prone skin

Fact: Oil-free, water-based foundation is fine for this skin type and can be used on special occasions. However, for daily makeup, loose powder is better because it helps absorb excess oil. First, apply a cover-up formulated to heal while it hides, then dust on powder that matches your skin tone. Be extra meticulous about removing every trace of makeup daily.
