The hearings will determine if jurors will hear certain testimony, including some on DNA evidence allegedly linking Mr. Johnson to the scene of Piscataway home-maker Gail Shollar's murder, said Anderson Harkov. Prosecutors have alleged Mr. Johnson kidnapped Mrs. Shollar from the Middlesex Mall here on election night November 1992, raped her, murdered her and then left her body in a Piscataway lumber yard where it was found the next day. If convicted, Mr. Johnson could face the death penalty. Defense attorneys have said they may cite diminished capacity in Mr. Johnson's defense, essentially arguing if the accused did kill Mrs. Shollar, it was due to a deficiency in his mental capacity, and he did not mean to do so. The first of three pre-trial hearings is slated to begin Monday, Dec. 12, Mr. Harkov said. One hearing will determine whether jurors will be permitted to hear evidence about DNA analysis done on samples taken at the murder site, Mr. Harkov said. Prosecutors contend the evidence will link Mr. Johnson to the scene of the murder, he said. A second hearing will determine if Mr. Johnson was aware of his rights when he made three separate statements to law enforcement officials, the attorney said. The third hearing will decide the admissibility of information about the defendant's prior conviction on purse-snatching charge, Mr. Harkov said. Eighth-grader checks out shuttle film

The Liberty Science Center in Jersey City has been looking for junior high school students with the right stuff.

No, it is not looking for astronauts, but for students willing to come and review Destiny in Space, a new film about the space shuttle program at the Kodak Omnivision Theater. And Mohamed Shiliwala, an eighth-grader at South Plainfield Middle School, was the kind of pupil the center was seeking.

"We get a good number of kids to come here who already like sci-ence," said Elizabeth Graham of the center's public affairs department. State approves budget over Woskey's 'veto'

The state Department of Community Affairs has approved the borough's $17 million 1995 fiscal year budget, despite a questionable veto by former Republican Mayor

Last week, Mr. Woskey said he would veto the budget adopted by the Democrat-controlled Borough Council, citing what he believed would amount to a $10 million shortfall.

Democrats, however, questioned the mayor's statutory power to veto the budget.

Late last month, council members voted 4-2 along party lines to adopt the budget. The mayor protested that move at a meeting Thursday, Oct. 27, and the following Monday pledged to veto the budget. The budget, however, has been accepted by the Borough Clerk and sent on to Trenton, Councilman John Pulomena said.

Under the 1995 budget, the local purpose tax rate will hold steady at 55 cents per every $100 of assessed value.

agree on how much capacity South Plainfield had been using and would need in the future. In addition, South Plainfield officials had believed the payments they made for 20 years meant they were purchasing partial ownership of the system, and with it the right to use the system without further payments to Plainfield.

A Superior Court Judge imposed the moratorium in 1987, after South Plainfield and Plainfield failed to settle a lawsuit stemming from the dispute.

The $6.1 million regionalization agreement would "take care of all outstanding rental [costs] since 1979, as well as any issue relative to additional capacity," Mr. Pulomena said Tuesday.

The agreement will also ensure the borough is an "equal member" of the PJM regional authority, he said. South Plainfield will be an agement and maintenance of the

Over the years, borough officials considered several solutions to the sewer problems, including building a separate system for South Plainfield.

But an independent system would have cost $15 million to $20 million to build, would not have settled the dispute with Plainfield, and would have left much of the borough still dependent on the PJM system, the councilman said.

Joining the regional utility and ending the moratorium will have financial benefits for the borough.

Motor vehicle accidents are the leading cause of death and injury for American children, ranking ahead of all other types of accidents. Accidents claim more lives than any childhood disease.

Trauma from automobile accidents is also a major cause of epilepsy and paraplegia in children. In fact, the American Academy of Pediatrics has stated that the trauma suffered by children riding unprotected in cars involved in accidents is the major cause of death and serious injury threatening children today. It is for this reason that all 50 states and the District of Columbia have passed child restraint usage laws.

During a sudden stop, swerve, or crash, all occupants of a motor vehicle need protection from impact with the car's interior. They also need to be restrained to prevent ejection from the vehicle itself. If unrestrained, infants and children are thrown around the vehicle like flying missiles. In a 30 mph crash, a child may be thrown forward with a force equal to 20 times his own weight. That's like falling from a three-story building.

Young passengers are most helpless. They are dangerously exposed to serious head injuries because they have disproportionately larger include: heads and softer, underdeveloped bones. It should be remembered that children are not small adults. Under identical situations, a young child is much more likely to be injured than an adult. Each year 600-700 passengers younger than dren up to four (about 40 pounds). five years old are killed and more than 50,000 injured as a result of tended for older children. for installing child safety seats. The manual will indicate if you will need extras such as a locking clip that secures the vehicle safety belt around the child safety seat, or an accessory belt for fitting child seats in particular seating positions.

If your child is old enough to help you select the seat, then take this opportunity to ask him to help choose. If the child can be involved in the purchase decision, he will be more likely to enjoy using the seat.

Select a child safety seat that is easy to use and convenient so that you will use it every time you transport your child. Have your child sit in several seats and try them out. The seat should fit your child's weight and height and should be comfortable. Try installing the seat in your car to be certain that it fits and can be tightly secured. Key points to remember

The best safety seat is one that suitable and comfortable for is your child's age and size, can be securely installed in your vehicle, and that you will use each and every time your child rides in a motor vehicle.

· Buckle up yourself! An unrestrained adult can be thrown into other passengers and cause serious or even fatal injuries. Your children need you alive and well. Protect them by protecting yourself.

 Most motor vehicle collisions and injuries occur at low speeds and close to home. · Infants should be transported only in a rear-facing infant or convertible safety seat.

• Pull all straps and belts tight. Loose or sloppy belts may contribute to injury in a crash.

· Check for hot buckles and metal frames on your child's car seat during warm weather. The car's interior gets much hotter than the outside temperature, and cases of children being burned from the hot metal have been reported. Cover the child car seat with a lightcolored fabric to reflect the heat. Fabric car seat covers may be pur-

Crowning achievement Repairing Hadley Road would be council's greatest accomplishment

Spring has melted into summer. Summer has fallen into autumn. "Silly season" is finally over and we face yet another long winter with an unrepaired Hadley Road.

All the progress South Plainfield has made this year would pale before the accomplishment of fixing Hadley Road. The repair of the worst road in the borough would be council's crowning achievement - if it had happened.

We've all heard the same excuses for several years now, only the parties in power have changed. Lack of drainage, lack of funding, lack of time before the first snowfall - is any excuse enough when South Plainfield residents must drive every day down a road that is decaying at an everescalating pace?

The situation is so bad now, that the potholes, ruts and craters have overpowered the road so that the left lanes of Hadley in either direction are virtually impassable.

Well, the time has come to cease shilly-shallying about and fix the road.

A council that can bring in a 1995 budget that cuts expenses without increasing taxes, that can negotiate an end to a years-long sewer moratorium, should be able to figure out a way to fund repairs to Hadley and get the work done in a reasonable amount of time.

No one cares anymore why Hadley Road is the way it is. They only care that it gets fixed. Council should do whatever it takes to get the job done.

'Free' public education is increasingly costly

To The Reporter:

A-4

I am very concerned with the very high and ever-escalating cost of our "free" public education, especially here in South Plainfield.

In South Plainfield, the 1994-1995 average base teacher's salary is $55,000. The highest base teacher salary in South Plainfield this year is $64,175. There are 45 teachers in South Plainfield making over $60,000 per year. On top of that, there are stipends for yearbook advising, etc. Those stipends add additional $1,500 on average per year to the teacher earnings.

For the year 1990-1991, the average base teacher salary in South Plainfield was 9 percent higher than the New Jersey average ($42,926 versus $39,322). This year, our teachers are receiving average base salaries that are 15 percent letter. higher than the New Jersey teachaverage ($55,000 versus ers

The above-mentioned teachers base salaries do not depend on teacher effort or performance (tenure protection). These salaries are, as teachers are quick to complain, for 10 months work.

Average Unite States yearly salary for people with four years or more of college education is about $36,500. This includes medical doctors, lawyers, etc. Taking into account that the average student admitted into a teacher's college will not be admitted to medical, law or engineering school, we can see why we have a system which is out of whack.

I am also very concerned with the low quality of South Plainfield public education - low as compared to other New Jersey schools. But that is a subject for another

Flamini clears air over comments

To The Reporter:

On Oct. 6, 1994 an [advertisement] appeared in The Reporter regarding a statement that I made at the Aug. 30, 1994, Board of Education meeting. I believe it may be helpful to clarify the statement in reference to Inclusion and teacher training.

In response to the question from the Board of Education president as to why teachers were not trained during the summer, my response was simply that teachers are not available during the summer (since, contractually, teachers are employed from September to June). My response was meant as a statement of fact and was not meant in any way to discredit the teaching staff of our schools. Therefore, staff training was planned for the first two professional days of the school year when teachers were due to return to their assignments

What I failed to mention in my response was that many teachers were more than willing to attend summer training sessions made available through the Department of Education. Teachers were informed of this training through their building principals.

Unfortunately, the training sessions to which the district was hoping to send teachers were oversubscribed and closed out quickly. Therefore, I immediately initiated plans to provide district-wide training on Sept. 8 and 9, days that were designated as professional in-service days. Over 50 teachers (including the seven pairs of teachers preparing to im- pleted training and the planned future training will plement collaborative teaching in their classes) at- he for the benefit of our students, who are our numtended workshop sessions on in-class support and ber one concern. collaborative teaching on these days.

professional days have always been a part of the school calendar, and training has always been an ongoing process. Every district in the state, including so there was a lot of chit-chat, but South Plainfield, is required to develop a three-year plan known as the Comprehensive System of Personnel Development. Therefore, training on Inclusion and related topics has occurred over the last several years. However, that does not discount the fact that continued training is essential since the learning process for all of us is never-ending.

As an educator, I have only the highest regard for the teachers in the classroom and the excellent manner in which they perform while instructing the children of our schools. Professional development is an important process in meeting the everyday challenges of teaching students with diversified learning styles, especially as we attempt to educate all children in their neighborhood schools. To this end, nearly 150 teachers have received training within the district on the topics of Inclusion and In Class Support since the start of the school year in September. Additional teachers will receive further training as these opportunities become available at the Learning Resource Center, in Old Bridge, New Jersey and they will be provided with the opportunity to visit nearby districts implementing collaborative teaching.

Flights

We go throughout life "making friends," but often they are merely pals. True friends — those who know you inside-out — are rare. I have only three friends to whom I have bared my soul. Thankfully, they have not fled shrieking.

Lorraine and I go back 20 years to when Jim and I had our first apartment. My family wasn't speaking to me, my friends lived in other states, and I was lonely.

When Lorraine's sons, ages 4 and 5, introduced themselves as my new neighbors, I was apprehensive because I'm not overly fond of ghildren and have none of my own, As time went by, I grew to love those boys, and as they got older, they sometimes told me things, they were afraid their mother wouldn't understand. Lorraine and I became close friends as well, though I never betrayed the confidences of her sons.

If a 44-year-old woman can have a "best friend," she is mine She and her (then) husband visited us five years ago, but just for the day, no real conversation. When she flew here from Florida on business last week, I was bouncing off the walls with anticipation. Jim had to work Sunday, so we had lots of time for "girl talk."

Lorraine and I immediately fell into that easy camaraderie we have had for years. We laughed, we reminisced and we said naughty things about her ex-husband. Since we had last seen each other, we had both changed careers, she had divorced, one her sons had gotten married and had three children and there had been various other changes in both our lives. We shared confidences, compared our marriages and, of course, talked about sex.

Talking after being apart so long was like writing a high school term paper. We had a whole sheaf of notes" in front of us. Now we had

Timing is everything at election time

By EVELYN HALL

THE REPORTER

Long ago, in a South Jersey township far removed in distance and philosophy from South Plainfield, a rookie reporter listened enrapt as a mayoral wannabe prepared to reveal the "dirty secret life" of the popular mayor he was trying to unseat.

The wannabe leaned across his littered desk, wafting stale, ciga-rette-scented breath in the reporter's eager face. Knowing timing is everything, he paused for dramatic effect, then hissed: "He's gay."

It wasn't anything I didn't already know about the upstanding, honest-to-a-fault mayor who had, for the three years of his term, turned in balanced budget after balanced budget without a single tax increase in excess of 2 cents. It was, however, a graphic lesson in how manipulative small town politics can become.

Former Mayor Michael Woskey's 11th-hour attack on the Democrats' 1995 fiscal year budget was a new lesson for me.

Let me sketch the framework for you

You probably know The South Plainfield Reporter publishes on Thursdays. Usually, the South Plainfield Borough Council meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays. That means whatever happens on a Thursday doesn't make it into our paper until the following Thursday. On Tuesday, Oct. 18, Borough Council introduced its 1995 budget, a spending plan that reduced expenses without increasing the local purpose tax rate. Mayor Woskey and Republican Michael DeNardo were absent from that meeting. Our report on the budget introduction appeared in the Oct. 20 edition of The Reporter.

Borough Council met again Tuesday, Oct. 25, and Mayor Woskey was present at that meeting. Nothing was mentioned about the budget.

On Thursday, Oct. 27, the day we reported on the Oct. 25 meeting, who called the mayor's charges "an the day I die. council met again, this time to adopt the budget. The elections were still nearly two weeks away, but only one Thursday away -The Reporter would appear before the elections.

Inclusion teaches about 'real world'

(Continued from page A-4) demic levels are too low, that he'll never keep up, that my child will be lost. Here are my reasons and goals as to why it is so important to have my child included in the general education classroom.

In a special class program my child will never keep up with ageappropriate peers. The children in these programs are never given the opportunity. In the special class program, they shelter students and "bring them along slowly." This is wonderful if we never expect the child to participate or live in the real world, but for the student who must eventually learn to live in the real world, sheltering is not the way to be educated.

Eventually, I want my child to have a real job. In the "world," there are no sheltered "real" jobs. In the "world," they must learn to be on their own and in that world they must have the tools to compensate for their weaknesses. By being in a general education class, my child would be exposed to the general population and hopefully tearn how to get ideas across to the teacher and other students. Children learn by imitation, therefore, my child would learn age appropriate skills and behavior.

Academically, my child may not be able to do all the things that the general education teacher requires her pupils to do. That is where the special education teacher comes into play; the special teacher would be able to make the modifications that the student needs. It might only mean that the materials need to be read to the student. Then the student can demonstrate that he or she understands the concept being taught through talking with the teacher.

My child would make friends! Hopefully, these children would see my child's strengths, understand my child's weaknesses and realize that everyone has weak-children with disabilities can and activity. Are there some basics? should be full and participating members of the class and the school community. This would follow all students to the outside world and foster the acceptance of all persons with disabilities.

Does this process take extra work? Yes! And I applaud the teachers that are willing to do it. They are a special group.

Does it take extra and intense training? I think the common sense approach is best. Aren't all teachers supposed to be able to teach all the students in their classes? Is there a magic answer for teachers on how to teach these special children? Is there someone out there who has all the answers?

As a parent I have spent hours at workshops and reading material on "In Class Support" and "Inclusion." What I have found repeatedly is that there is no single answer. Every child is different; there are no magic answers. We must learn as we go along and try different approaches and communicate with each other and work very hard to give the best of ourselves to the children in order to get the best out of them. This is all that most parents ask for all students, with or without disabilities.

What I feel is missing most in this discussion over where children should be placed and how that placement should be handled is "The Child First" concept. The first question that should be asked and the most important one is "Will the child benefit from this?" The an-swer is "Yes." Then we must all work for the child first.

I urge the members of the SPEA to stop making hasty judgments of administrators and stop focusing on isolated remarks and misinterpreted statements. The association should refocus on the positives and accept our children into their classrooms. The training for teaching children with disabilities in a general education class is a hands-on

Yes, but I believe that most teachers who care already have these skills and the rest is accomplished through discussions with parents, special educators, child study team members, the students themselves and hard work. A much better approach to the training question. would be a committee that is willing to meet as time goes on to dis-cuss solutions and strategies to assist teachers as challenges appear.

I have found Mr. Flamini to be a strong supporter of the South Plainfield teaching staff and stu-dents with disabilities.

Public lambasting serves no useful purpose. Discussion and direct communication are more positive tools to utilize positive outcomes for both sides of any discussion. The funds utilized to purchase the advertisement could have been used in a positive manner to promote cooperation, not to foster negativism.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD PUBLIC LIBRARY

Once again, this time, I've got two subjects to write about. They aren't as different as the last time, but there is a bit of a gap. Again, I've tried to put them together.

As I hope you're aware, tomor-row marks Veteran's Day. This of course is the day we've set aside to honor those who've served our country in the armed forces.

Looking at our video collection, I've found an excellent movie on the subject, The Best Years of Our Lines. This heartfelt story stars Dana Andrews, Frederic March, and Harold Russell as three veterans returning from World War II. Their homecoming is not as smooth as they'd hope, as each deals with returning suddenly to a very different life. The story traces heir efforts to readjust to civilian ife and their families.

This is perhaps the best film ever made on the subject of returning veterans. A very moving and honest film directed by William Wyler, it won seven Academy Awards, including Best Picture. Film buffs might be interested to know that our copy includes the original trailer for the film.

All in all, this is a top-notch movie about a very important subject. If you're interested, just come into the library and check it out.

At the library

Here's something you may not be aware of. The week of Nov. 6-12 is Children's Book Week. At the risk of self-promotion, I'd say a good way to observe this event is to bring your children to the library. I'm sure you'll be able to find books they're interested in, and we'll be glad to help you look.

Our children's section is wellstocked with a variety of books from Dr. Seuss to Beatrix Potter. There's also an extensive juvenile paperback section, including popular series like The Babysitters Club and Sweet Valley High. Whatever your child's interests and tastes, there's a book for her on our shelves. (Within reason, of course.) Encurage your child to read. It may not be like watching the John Carl Wizda Power Rangers, but she'll catch on.

The library will be closed tomorrow for Veteran's Day.

There will be a story time program for children 3-6 at 11 a.m. Tuesday and 1 p.m. Wednesday.

will be 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. The library will be celebrating Children's Book Week Nov. 14-20.

THE SERVICE REAL PROPERTY AND A REAL PROPERTY.

As school custodians, grounds, and maintenance workers in South Plainfield, we're frustrated.

In an effort to keep our jobs, we previously offered the board of education $300,000 in givebacks.

Now we stand prepared to give the board yet another $300,000.

This savings - $600,000 - equals the projected savings offered by out-of-town profiteers.

But the school board refuses even to discuss our concessions.

As school employees, we continue to give 100% to our schools.

We invite you to visit your local school and judge our performance for yourself.

Please don't let profiteers bring strangers into our schools.

Ask the school board to be fair with us. Come to the board of education meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 15. Let your feelings be heard.

November 20th • 12:00 PM to 1:30 PM SHEENAN FUNERAL HOME Open to the Public with NO Cost or Obligation.

Dear Friend.

Please join us on Sunday, November 20, for CHANGING SEASONS, a day of hope, a day of renewal, and a day to find peace with the Holidays.

The Holidays can be especially difficult after the death of a loved one. This joyous time, full of memories, often increases the distress of the bereaved. You may have doubts and questions about celebrating Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Years. We want to help you make the memories of your loved ones a meaningful part of your holiday this year.

For this and many other reasons, my staff and I are sponsoring CHANGING SEASONS, a very unique day with reasonable ways to "grow through the Holidays" while struggling with mixed emotions. The talk will unite the essentials needed to regain celebration during the Holidays plus creative and responsive ways to prepare for and welcome the inspiring peace that the Holidays impart. Our speaker will be Dr. Susan Arlen, M.D., medical director of the Hospices at Somerset Medical Center. Dr. Arlen is a psychotherapist specializing in the losses associated with death, disability, life-changing illness, and caregiving. She has written extensively and spoken internationally on these subjects. She is committed to the notion that the bereaved need tender care, nurture and understanding.

Do something for yourself by joining us on SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 20, from 12:00 PM to 1:30 PM at the funeral home. Refreshments will be served. Reservations are not necessary.

We encourage you to bring members of your family or friends. Be assured that all are welcome to this beneficial step toward the renewal of your spirit.

Sincerely, Thomas E. Sheenan

Tiger roar is reduced to whimper by Falcons

By JOSEPH W. SAMULKA THE REPORTER

Did you ever get the feeling that you shouldn't have gotten out of bed?

That's exactly what the South Plainfield football team must have felt like after Saturday's 28-0 loss to Monroe at Falcon Stadium.

"It was one of those freak days that everything that can go wrong, went wrong," said Tiger Head Coach Phil McGuane.

Even before the start of the McGuane. game, Tiger fortunes took a turn for the worst when running back Kevin Clark didn't suit up for the game. He had suffered back spasms since Tuesday.

THE REPORTER

Today's society is preoccupied with money, so it's not surprising that the most popular occupations also pay the best salaries.

However, South Plainfield's Louis "Butchie" Conselina Jr., 35, doesn't fall in that category.

He's a standardbred horse owner and trainer who is doing what he's doing because it's what he enjoys.

Conselina's 11-horse stable consists primarily of older claiming horses which race for $15,000 at most. He won't get rich quick since the more substantial purses are for 2- and 3-year old stakes races, but he enjoys it just the same.

Conselina, who gets $30-35 a day for training a horse, receives five percent of what the horse wins in a race; the driver also gets five. The owner is awarded the other 90 percent.

According to Conselina, horse upkeep costs for a trainer run about $16,000 a year including grooming, shoeing, feed, veterinarian bills and transportation. The cost to the owner is about $20,000.

Conselina's stable - Circle M ing tools. "Today, I wish I would Farms - is located in Jackson, Ocean County. That's where he spends much of his time, but he gets back to South Plainfield about a dozen times a year.

DAVID GIPSON/THE REPORTER

Like many horsemen, he was influenced by family like his father, 100 hours a week at his stable and Louis Sr., who had a stable at Johnson Park in Piscataway when Conselina was a child. It was there that Conselina learned about the sport which caught his fancy.

Conselina was quite old (25) by harness racing standards when he decided to make the sport his livelihood.

After Lou Sr. retired from the sport to live in North Carolina, Conselina picked up where his father left off, by training some horses for Mike Miele.

Today, Conselina has a trusted partnership with Colts Neck's Gino Palazzolo, who owns and drives much of the South Plainfield resident's stock.

"I fought it when I was younger. I was rebelling and I thought about doing something different," said Conselina who tinkered with the idea of being a mechanic and sell-have done this out of high school - it's something that I wanted to do my whole life.

There has to be a genuine love for the sport, because it's not uncommon for Conselina to spend at the track making sure his horses will be in top form for upcoming races.

Oct. 29. Conselina took his horses for a jog at 6:30 a.m., shipped them to Yonkers Raceway that night and didn't return back in Jackson until 3:30 a.m. the next morning.

"You have to love it. It's a fulltime job. You have to work seven days a week because it consumes a lot of your time," Conselina said. "You don't have to work at it you live it. I think I'll do it till I die.

The Chevrolet Impala SS is big on size, power and handling, small on price.

It could be ordered with the Super Sport performance and trim option which added heavy-duty shocks, stiffer spring rates and metallic brake linings. Quick-turn steering helped direct the 3,700-pound behemoth, and with up to 360 horses from a 409 cubic-inch engine, it was the most powerful Chevrolet offered.

black, but later models will see a couple of colors added to the spectrum. Reshaped rear quarter windows, special SS emblems and a short rear deck spoiler creates upswept definition to its haunches. Total abthe SS perfect for pulling "hole shots" at traffic lights, or rumbling through the burger joint on cruise night. Body-colored mirrors, grille and window trim exude an aura of performance.

INTERIOR

Inside Impala SS are leather bucket seats with the traditional leaping Impala figure embroidered on the backrests. Standard equipment includes cruise control, air conditioning and an anti-theft system. In addition, powered items such as windows, door locks, mirrors and the driver's seat all come as standard fare. There's a floor console, but no shifter is housed column. Usable cupholders and storage well worth the extra cost.

The Impala's willingness to hustle through tight corners also impressed us. Thick anti-sway bars are fitted both front and rear, while its special shock absorber's sence of brightwork, with the exception of damping rates vary with wheel impact the polished five-spoke 17-inch alloy speeds. The car doesn't exhibit that "floatiwheels, give the Impala SS that "street or ness" characteristic of similar vehicles, strip" look. The car sports a different grille and exhibits some understeer on tighter than the basic Caprice from which it was corners. Quick ratio power steering is derived, while fat P255/50ZR17 tires make standard, gives good steering feel and an agility not usually inherent in large cars. For longevity, platinum-tipped spark plugs that last up to 100,000 miles compliment GM's three-year/36,000-mile warranty, 24hour roadside assistance program and sixyear/100,000-mile rust-through protection.

SAFETY

Along with a sheer weight advantage (it helps in crashes), the Impala SS comes with dual airbags, ABS and side-impact beams.

Custom-built ranch shows style, convenience

Set in Mountainside, this contemporary ranch home is custombuilt with some delightful features for comfortable living. In an area with many homes custom-built in the '50s and '60s, the home is a youthful 12 years old.

The home sits on an almost halfacre of land where its exterior of wood siding with stone at the front is complemented nicely by trees and professionally-landscaped shrubbery. A wooded island between the driveway and house provides privacy and a pleasant view, with trees to the left of the house offering cover from New Providence Road and additional trees standing in an open backyard. A two-car garage is attached and the circular driveway winds in front of the corner property, giving two points of access to Bayberry Lane.

There is a double-door entry into the 12-by-13 entrance fover, which has a ceramic tile floor and accords a spacious welcome to the interior of the home. The open living room, which has a palatial, yet homey feel, with a sunken floor, cathedral ceiling, two skylights and built-in stereo speakers. A raised hearth fireplace is made of the same stone at the front of the home. A formal, elegant dining room offers 13-by-16 feet of elbow room. The ultra-modern 13-by-19 kitchen provides an eating nook, counter-top range with grill, selfcleaning wall oven, dishwasher and refrigerator. All cabinetry has been upgraded and a center island makes preparing food hassle-free.

The 15-by-19 master bedroom has a convenient combination of a walk-in closet and dressing area. The 7-by-8 master bathroom has twin vanity mirrors. The two other bedrooms are 13-by-15 and 12-by-13. The main bathroom offers 6by-9 feet of space and is sectioned off, with toilet and tub in a separate area from the vanity. A powder room provides a pedestal sink.

There is a full, unfinished basement covering the full length of the house minus the garage. That leaves room for creativity, such as turning it into a recreation room. Two-zone central air conditioning and two Lenox furnaces with builtin humidifiers keeps the right climate indoors regardless of the season.

Top-notch paint job begins with preparation homeowners. While usually tackled in the spring, painting exteriors still may be done as long as temperatures stay moderate. Below are tips designed to keep your home in good shape, whether it be touch-ups on window sills or painting the front porch.

Stanley F. Ehrlich, president of the Community Builders Association of N.J. based in Stirling, suggests when you start a home maintenance project, you often find other things that should be done. For example, while cleaning your windows, you notice that there is mildew on the trim and sash. and the fungus has made its way onto your siding. You also know that severe cases of mildew contamination can ruin not only a paint job but also what's under it. In order to protect your home, you must get rid of that mildew

First, make sure the discoloration on your paint is, in fact, mildew-related. To test, apply a few drops of bleach to one of the blotches, wait five minutes and rinse. If the dark color disappears where the bleach was applied, then the spot is likely to be mildew. To clean the surface thoroughly, scrub it with a solution of mild household detergent to eliminate dirt and other organic material. Then rinse the surface with a garden hose. Wash the surface with a solution of one part bleach to three parts water, then leave the bleach solution on the surface for several minutes to give it sufficient time to kill the mildew. Finally, rinse the surface thoroughly with a garden hose.

You should wear protective gloves and goggles to avoid skin and eye irritation. If it's time to repaint your home's exterior and your home is mildew-prone, the Paint Quality Institute recommends you use a top quality exterior latex coating since latex paints resist mildew better than oil-based or alkyd paints. They say latex paint works better because it contains fewer nutrients on which the fungi can feed. And the National Association of Home Builders Research center notes that microscopic pores in the latex paint layers allow water vapor to pass through the dried paint film. This HILLSBOROUGH - Weichert, Realtors Central New Jersey Offices will participate in an open house spectacular 12-4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 12 and Sunday, Nov. 13. This is the second spectacular the region has held; the first, held in October, attracted more than 2,000 homebuyers to see homes currently listed-with Weichert.

'Along with significant facts about each home, our dedicated sales associates will be available to answer questions and provide information about the comprehensive range of real estate services Weichert, Realtors offers its customers." said Bob Albrecht, Weichert, Realtors regional vice president.

Homebuyers can obtain information on the affordability of each home, based on monthly payments, and how to qualify for a mortgage. Finally, Mr. Ehrlich states, "In addition to under the paint is damaged, you may need extra protection."

Six New Jersey driving tips

1. If the license plate is from New York, then yes, they really are going to do if.

2 Never never signal. That only gives it away.

2. If the light turns green and you have to wait longer than a mann-second, book your horn several times at the slowpoke driver in front.

4. Put your favorite police benevolent fund stücker in the window to protect you from all known moving wiolations. It's the best auto insurance two fickets to the policeman's ball can buy.

 A red octagonal sign indicates you should tap your brakes just hard enough for the brakelights to flicker before proceeding into the intersection.

 If there's a lot of traffic, race up the shoulder and cut in. It's quicker that way.

The 'Duh' Files

Real life mornies from the police files of Forties Newspagers.

A Serich Plains man told police carlier this year that a woman he'd met the night before and with whom he'd shared a hotel room had borrowed his car and hot returned with it.

According to the report, the man said held met the woman, whom he only was able to identify as "Michelle." Monday night, and the two spent the night at the Holiday Inn in South Plainfield. The man said that when they woke up Tuesday moming, Michelle asked to borrow his car for 20 minutes to drive to Plainfield, and said she "definitely" would be night back, police said. The man agreed and handed her the keys, but by early afternoon the woman still hadin't returned with the car, police said.

The car was a 1985 Plymouth Reliant worth $1,300

Weekend Plus ticket winners

What surprised our expert answer team was not the more than 50 contest responses to our Ye Olde Weekend Plus Competition. That was great and thanks a bunch. We should do this more often.

No, what really amazed them was two anywers to a supposedly far too easy' contest were actually urrong.

Believe it or not – despite the word being spelt out twice in the question – one contestant (you know who you are) actually misspelt 'medieval'. We can suggest a good Christmas present to your hoved ones (Chue a book).

Another entrant forgot to answer all the four questions.

So at least we are starting to form a clearer picture of who reads this paper. And they say a paper reflects its readership...

Yet surely this must be some sort of indictment of the education system? Everything else seems to be. Those first 10 randomly plucked out of the bag were:

Amy Bobrowski of Cranford Jeffrey McKay, Elizabeth Laurie Gelfand, Westfield Joan E. Sundelof, Piscataway Aaton Casper, Somerset Bella P. Klein, Westfield Sharon Siggins, Piscataway Lynnethe M. Dadaian, Franklin Park

Liz Laupa, Somerset

M. Harris, Warnen Jess Howart, Westfield

They have each won a pair of tickets to Medieval Times. Either come to our office in Somerville, or we'll send them to you. Bring some proof of identity. To have it sent, call the editor Andy McEwen, 722-3000 Ext. 6331 and he'll take down your address.

We're still not satisfied. We want to run more contests with more fabulous silly prizes.

Whether you're the boss of a small business, large corporation or even a giant multinational with an extremely dubious approach to labor laws or the environment, we want to hear from you.

We're on the lookout for we'rd and wonderful prizes for our readers. We'll compromise almost any shred of our ethical or journalistic integrity. Why not give us a call about it? Call Diane Kranz in advertising (908)722-300 Ext. 6131. Happenings8

Doing battle with the lunch gods

FFKEND CONFIDENT

Wouldn't you think if you arrived at the office early and worked diligently all morning, the gods would not conspire during

Weekend Confidential went to a bank branch to deposit a check. Instead of using the empty stall with the pneumatic tube we drove behind the single car at the window and waited...and waited ...and waited as one car and then another used the empty stall. Finally we got the hint, backed out and then into the empty stall while the other car was still transacting

Now late, we drove to a nearby sub shop for a quick sandwich to go and a cup of black coffee for Weekend Confidential and coffee with milk for a co-worker. We waited in a rather long line, then was directed to the self-serve coffee machine. Poured half a cup...the machine was empty. Had to wait until a new brew was done and impatiently waited again to pay the bill. Jumped in the car, started out of the parking lot when in came a car from nowhere Stomped on the breaks, lunch went flying pouring co-worker's coffee on the floor rug while saving Weekend Confidential's own cup. quirky. Call their voices nerdy. Even call them what they are, geniuses. But you have to respect a band that sells its own coffee. When Weekend Confidential caught the Giants-Frentel-Frank Black (acoustic) triple bill Sunday. Oct. 23 down Interstate 95 at the Tower Theater in Philadelphia, a $5 bag of They Might Be Giants coffee lay among the various overpriced T-shirts that blanketed the souvenir stand. So, of course, we bought a bag.

Taking off from the title of its new release, John Henry, They Might Be Giants (John Linnell and John Flansburgh) have produced a "John Henry Brand" of South American coffee beans that, according to the label, is what the band drinks before every show and is perfect to have just before enjoying a They Might Be Giants show

Although Confidential is a not a coffee expert, it wasn't bad when we tried some after the show. At least it was better than the $2.50 Dixie cup of ice with a little soda poured in it the food stand sold.

The creators of such hummable classics like "Particle Man," "Don't Let's Start" and "Birdhouse In Your Soul," the Giants always know how to make a rock concert fun. No condoms were passed out.

Giants just asked you to enjoy a nice, hot cup of their coffee

A baleful roll in the hay

Weekend Confidential went for a roll in the hay recently and it was not the best of times

First of all it was not that kind of roll in the hay - it was a haunted hayride, de-emphasis on the haunted.

If lameness were a beauty trait, this hayride would have been Miss Universe.

We were chugging along behind a tractor on a wagon desperately in need of shock absorbers.

As we make our way along a narrow path through the woods, the first wave of ghouls run out of the darkness with as much terror as a Charmin toilet tissue commercial.

The adolescent goons soon realize they are not scaring us, so they begin to ask for beer or eigarettes until one of our party tells them to wait until their voices change and then ask again.

Around the next bend, we encounter a chainsaw-wielding midget who, despite his efforts at yanking the cord, can't get the damn thing running.

You Work and the obligatory hay fight.

We are still finding fragments of that fateful evening in a surprising number of places.

The night climaxed with a bonfire discussion with wienies, soda and toasted marshmallows.

Unfortunately, we added too much wood to the fire and soon had a raging inferno that came precariously close to setting our hay bales and the overhanging branches aflam

Once the safety of the forest critters was assured, we headed home to the terror of our daily lives, which was certainly more scary then the hayride itself.

Some like it hotter than others

Can someone please tell Weekend Confidential where we can find a hot cup of coffee - one that will stay hot for at least two minutes after purchase?

The Cheese Shop in Westfield has good Hazelnut decaf, but by the time you dispense it into your Styrofoam cup, add a little milk and whisk off to the train station, it's a hikewarm cup at best. This is the norm for many places who use these thermo-pumps for helpyourself convenience. Have we given up our natural rights for a steaming hot cup of coffee for mere convenience?

- they may sound like embarrassing scenarios to lead you into a sexual harassment suit, but guess again.

These are daring, romantic chess moves. There are even a couple named after New Jersey players.

There's the Durkin's Attack, named after former Blackwood resident Robert Durkin. Or the Dunst Opening, named after Ted Dunst, who lived in Mercer County, and passed away a few years

"Neither of the openings is particularly good, except for their surprise value and sometimes that's all it takes," says Glenn Peterson, of the United States Chess Federa-

"It is not everyone who can write a play or build a bridge or even make a good joke, but in chess everyone can, everyone must be intellectually productive and so can share in this select delight," claimed Siegbert Tarrasch, a world chess champion in the late 19th century.

Most historians agree chess originated in present day Asia more than 1,400 years ago. However, Egyptian artifacts have been discovered that resemble chess pieces and could date the game many centuries before that.

From those ancient origins, the game of chess has evolved into a microchip-driven entity to educate both the casual and the professional player.

Dennis Súllivan, a teacher at Somerville's Central School, brought the game to the school through a beginners club that utilizes computer software to assist students in learning the game. However, he prefers students play their biological counterparts,

The computer would beat us every time and that would be discouraging to the children," Sullivan says. He plans to introduce a table-top chess computer in the future, after the children have gotten a basic grasp on the moves and strategies.

Just as chess has evolved, so have the computer applications toward the game.

"Only recently have computers been developed that are powerful enough to solve the tremendous number of openings," Peterson rocked when a Pentium computer beat Gary Kasparov, the Profes sional Chess Association's World Champion, leaving questions about whether these powerful computers are just the latest tool or a death sentence for the game.

Peterson thinks the computers are good for the top players, as well as the casual player.

"It's good for the top players because they're using the machine to check their own analysis and to create opening innovations," Peterson says. "It's good for the average player because they can get a good game at any time.

There are computer programs today that offer as many as 24 different levels of difficulty. These may appeal to the science-minded, but there are other aspects to the computer-illiterate.

Arguments rage down the centuries as to whether the game of chess is a science or an art.

Chess, like love, like music, has the power to make men happy." said Siegbert Tarrasch.

Or as Sullivan sees it: "I'd rather see the children play chess then Nintendo.

It's fun, competitive and benefits their thinking skills. There is some research out there which shows chess has some carry over into planning and organizational skills, as well as concentration."

Sullivan looks at chess as "fun with a purpose," while Peterson takes a more eloquent stand on the nature of the game.

"It appeals to different people for different reasons," Peterson says. "Those with an analytical mind are attracted to the precision of the moves and the spatial relationship."

"Chess appeals to the creative person, as well, because they are continually creating, what many consider, a work of art over the board. Some people see the piece moving as a ballet or notes of music.

There are nearly 10,000 different configurations the board can have after each player has made only four moves, according to Peterson. That's a lot to comprehend.

But chess is not that difficult to learn, according to Peterson.

Depending on how much put into it, you can learn the basic moves in an hour or less,"

"Chess is a game you can play from the time you're in school until you're my age (76)," Gilmore "It stimulates your mind a says. lot. The better players get better, but the poorer players also get better because they learn."

And the game acts as the great leveler, Peterson says. Picture the scene: a 45-year-old member of the now-defunct Dunellen Chess Club approaches the big black and white board.

"It was about six years ago, when one of the members of my club was playing against a sixyear-old boy at an open tournament," Peterson says. "The kid laboriously filled out his scorecard in block letters and they started to play. The man loses one pawn and then he loses another. Now the kid is not so nice.

The child kneels on the chair to reach the board and begins tapping his pencil on the table as he yawns, according to Peterson.

"The kid wins another piece and the club member resigns the game," Peterson says. "He turned to the kid and said: 'You play a very good game of chess but your board manners aren't so good. The kid looked up at him with bulging eyes and said: 'I'm sorry, I guess it's because I missed my nap.'

Gilmore says he began playing chess with his father when he was 8 years old and played occasionally for a short time after.

"I hadn't played again for 40-50 years until this club started," Gilmore says, adding his advice to someone thinking about learning the game is to just try it, "Get some books and find someone who 12553 or call (800) 388-5464.

wants to play with you and try it. You don't have to be very smart, as far as book learning, but you learn to be very clever.

Mr. Sullivan's Somerville program is aimed at the 8 - 10-yearold children in Central School. It began in 1992 with eight students on a trial basis. It has grown to include 29 beginners this year, with another 25 mildlyexperienced players joining the club in January. "I've been playing chess for 35 years but I'm not a tournament player," Sullivan says. "I give something back to the game with the introductory club at school." "The program has been very successful so far," Mr. Sullivan says. "It's fun to see them doing something that's not required. The program is maybe something they wouldn't have been exposed to otherwise."

Chess is considered more of a sport in Europe than in the United States, or so Peterson believes.

"Almost every small town in Europe has a chess club," Peterson says. "There are 35 million people in the United States who play casually.

Peterson has organized eight clubs in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. He has been active in outlets for chess players to meet with fellow competitors, including a monthly tournament held in Somerset, the U.S. Blind Championships, which uses a peg set, as well as the U.S. Amateur Team Championship, which celebrates its 25th anniversary next year.

There are also nearly 76,000 members in the U.S. Chess Federation playing tournaments.

There are also more than 300 Grand Prix competitions held each year with prize money totaling nearly $500,000.

'We don't want to be a one-hit wonder," say China White.

Building up from the basement Edison rock band earns grassroots following of about 500 fans BY BILL HOWARD

Weekend Plus writer

Like many musicians coming out of high school, Edison natives Paul Galiszewski and Ed Dalley had dreams of becoming rock stars.

Unlike those same musicians, Galiszewski, Dalley and the rest of their edgy pop outfit, China White, were also prepared for the days when reality would set in.

"Once you really get into the business aspect, you realize how difficult it is," Galiszewski said as he and Dalley recently shared fries with their inquisitive Weekend Plus writer at the Plaza Diner on Route 27 in Edison

"It can take you a year to realize something you've been doing wrong. You correct it and then you realize something else.

"We've been promised a lot of things, and we've been told a lot of things, and now we just take it with a grain of salt," Dalley added.

"People say they can get your album played here and your tour to go there, but they want money first. Before you start anything, they want you to give them $500." With the business smarts of the band - Galiszewski on drums and percussion; Dalley on bass guitar and backing vocals; Middletown native Josh Stevens on lead vocals, rhythm guitar and fiddle; and Perth Amboy's Mike Beres on lead guitar and backing vocals - now equaling their musical skills, China White are ready for rock succes

"It's not a dream anymore," Dalley said. "It's real-ity and working to get that. We know you have to go out and get it. We can't just wait around and think we'll be playing a club and someone will discover us."

Carefully planning their steps, China White released Confessions on their own label, Apex Records, based in Edison. The release is just the latest step of a slow, but rewarding, climb since Dalley joined Galiszewski in an early version of China White in 1991. Since then, China White's fan club has grown to more than 500 members, and the band has had the chance to open for hard-rocking, major-label acts like Joan Jett, Warrant, Widowmaker and Kix., "There are some shows when you still get that weird feeling ...when there are a lot of people out there. It's exciting," Dalley said. "It's how our following grows. When you headline, anybody who's there is there to see you. When you open for a major act, you look out and see new people. You see them get into your music and they come back to your next show.

For a final number, China White turns to, of all instruments, a fiddle for a rousing version of "The Devil Went Down to Georgia." This Charlie Daniels Band cover has become a staple of their live shows since deciding two years ago to take their version out of Galiszewski's basement.

"It gets an overwhelming response. Overwhelming," Dalley said. "People are like, 'Wow.

"It's just a classic song that evervone knows.

Unlike the name of the band, whose meaning everyone seemed to know about but the band members.

"We were trying to think of a name that sounded 80's-ish, almost fake and that no one would take seriously," Galiszewski explained. "We wanted to take two words that didn't mean anything when you put them together. One day, we were looking on the back of a Scorpions album that had a song called 'China White.' Not knowing what it meant, we said, 'That sounds cool. "Later, on the road," he continued, "a couple of people told us that it's a drug. Now, it's becoming a topic at our shows. I think there's even a movie coming out called 'China White.' We've heard a lot of stuff from people saying, 'Hey, you took that name because of the drug,' which, honestly, is not the case. None of us are into drugs or anything

In the strange world of rock 'n roll, however, the controversy has only increased their popularity. "Couldn't happen at a better time," Dalley said with a smile before getting serious. "It doesn't bother us. The songs are what's most important.

To stay up to date on China White's latest doings or find out how to get Confessions, call the China White Hotline at 908-957-0162 or write to China White at Box 62, Edison 08818-0062.

Everything is relative

Family chews up truth and spits out insanity BY MICHAEL P. SCASSERA Weekend Plus theater critic

Throughout much of Relativity, the latest offering of New Brunswick's George Street Playhouse, a mother and her two adult children bicker about the truth of their family history.

One problem prevents the verbal struggle from reaching closure; this trio cannot even agree on the subject of an argument.

Neil, (Michael Rupert of Broadway's Falsettos,) is the younger of the children and, by all appearances, a seemingly conservative lawyer with a pretty, low-key wife (Laura Sametz) and a cozy home as lacking in turmoil as it is in character. In fact, were it not for a pornographic videotape resting atop his television set, Neil's life might seem the middle-American ideal.

Bursting in one snowy night, precursing the insanity to come and wrecking Neil's staid existence, is sister Audrey (the superb Kit Flanagan,) hoping to enlist the aid of her brother. After a first marriage to a psychotic podiatrist, Audrey is planning to wed again but needs her mother's signature in order to sell the house in which she lives with her children.

Audrey is desperately hoping to find terra firma for her life, yet she can't even remember the correct pronunciation of her intended's first name.

A few minutes later, Vera (Doris Belack,) the pair's realtor mother, enters the scene. Initially, Vera seems harmlessly maternal. She criticizes her daughter's parenting. rearranges the pillows on Neil's sofa, and soon thereafter announces matter-of-factly she is dving of cancer.

Or is she? Vera, according to her daughter, has a romantic history of which Neil has been blissfully igpassionate affair with her cousin, triguing mind-trap.

From this point on, the undeniably real. insanity of Relhybrid of As the World Turns and The Twilight Zone.

Like Audrey, Stein himself is wrestling with the complexity of human nature. Even though the playwright, like his characters, sometimes gets pinned to the mat by his own truth tampering, his courage is admirably in evidence throughout Relativity.

Granted, a play in which there's no empirical truth is bound to frustrate many an audience member - but for the more adventurnorant, a history which includes a ous, Stein has composed an in-

During its slightest moments, Relativity is like a drugged interthe Southern accent.

Gregory Hurst, George Street's nothing is certain and all informa- artistic director, stages the comedy tion is relayed through the horse's, with no music, no effects and no mouth. Stein's play is a kind of fanfare, a wise decision considering that Stein's mad, complex vision is quite enough for an average audience to absorb.

His cast is effective, with a stand-out turn by Flanagan, and the production is further aided by Deborah Jasien's detailed set, as authentically middle-America as the playwright's text is subversive.

Stein has written a zany, complex, intelligent comedy, a knowing play about unknowability, yet more work might strengthen the text

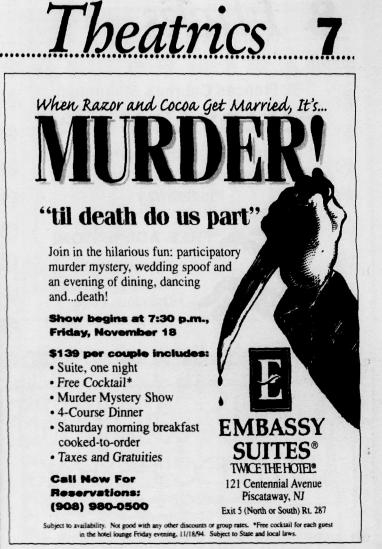

Relativity, as the script stands, plays like a lengthy one-act; an unnecessary intermission only defuses the play's considerable momentum.

Further changes would only strengthen an already unique, worthwhile new play, and Stein seems to understand the inevitability of change.

As Vera peacefully tells her family, once one accepts nothing is certain and that change is not only inevitable but continual, living is like floating on air.

Mother knows best. After all, if truth is relative, who has a better right to manipulate your reality than your family?

Relativity runs to November 20 at The George Street Playhouse, New Brunswick. Call the box office at (908) 246-7717.

Art pottery is one of the hottest collectibles in the market place today. Where can you find it? Many of the most valuable pieces of art pottery can be found under your kitchen sink in the form of old flower vases, cachepots and flower pots.

I have even discovered examples of old art pottery on garage shelves or mixed in with old flower pots and containers.

To discover the world of art pottery is to discover beautiful glazes, shapes, and colors

Ralph and Terry Kovel's book titled Kovel's American Art Pottery, The Collector's Guide to Makers, Marks, and Factory Histories serves as an excellent guide and resource book to those interested in learning more about pottery in our country made between the cently for $800 at a local N.J. auc-1870's and 1930's.

Makers, artists, dates, marks, and lines of pottery are described in detail. Some of the most collectible art pottery was made by the Dedham Factory in Dedham, Ma., between 1895 and 1943.

I collect the Bunny pattern and find the blue and white crackle glaze pottery with bunny borders graces the shelves of my corner cupboard and accents the nooks and crannies of my kitchen. A blue and white Bunny pattern milk pitcher ranges from $350-450; a dessert plate, $125-175; a cream jug and sugar bowl, $400-600.

Other popular and rare patterns of Dedham Pottery are the Lobster pattern, the Elephant pattern, and Turtle pattern. A set of six Lobster pattern dinner plates recently reached several thousand dollars in a New England regional auction.

Other sought-after art pottery noted for unusual form and glazes are the Fulper pieces from Flemington, N.J. The Fulper Company later changed its name to Stangl. Fulper made examples from flower vases to dolls. A Fulper doll sold at Dawson's auction last year for $1, 000

Ohio is noted for several collectible potteries. Rookwood, Roseville and Weller are highly sought after. Prices range from below $50 to several thousand for unusual signed pieces.

Grueby Faience Co., was located in Boston, Ma. with the matte glaze pieces commanding the highest prices. A small green vase with carved floral motif sold re-tion. Van Briggle from Colorado Springs, Colo. is noted for its matte glaze wares and raised designs hat's It Worth?

Art pottery was made in many unusual and experimental forms ranging from tiles to flower frogs, jardinieres, to candlesticks.

If you are investing in art pottery, my advice is to buy the best examples, and those that are signed by the artist if possible. Look for unusual glazes and shapes. Try never to buy damaged pieces.

We have discovered an international market for American art pottery and highly recommend the Antiques and the Arts Weekly, a weekly publication in Newtown, Ct., for those interested in following auction and antiques show prices for art pottery. Next month's article will feature Christmas holiday items such as antique Santas, toys, dolls, Teddy bears, tree ornaments and decorative holiday items. Send in your photos now, in order to be included.

What To Do

Send all information to: What To Do, Weekend Plus P.O. Box 699 44 Veteran's Memorial Drive East Somerville NJ 08876

Our fax is (908) 526-2509. We request all listings, pictures and humorous postcards should arrive 10 days ahead of time. That way, just like Mom or the CIA, we can always call you, check up on how you're doing.

If you're looking for more than a straight listing, then send it even earlier - two weeks earlier.

What we want

We want the name of the venue, the address, a phone number for information. We want a brief description of who's appearing, what's happening. We want to know the admission price or whether it's free.

You also might like to suggest which directory you would prefer it appear in.

What we get

What To Do welcomes black and white photos, color slides and boxes of candy. We welcome a change to a gentler, more caring society where all citizens can live together as equals and so on and so forth.

An Italian cafe with a touch of class

BY TANISHA SYKES Weekend Plus w

vou enter through the As double-sided glass doors, com- well with a bottle of the house red pounds of garlic and basil fill the air of The Church St. Trattoria. Or bring your own.

The trattoria, in New Brunswick is an Italian bistro with casual dress and a cozy, cafe-style atmosphere. The clientele "ranges from high school students to senior citizens," said proprietor and cook Brian Smith.

Although running your 01171 business can be hectic. Mr. Smith claims, "I love every day that I come to work. I'm very fortunate in that aspect.

He has been sole owner of the trattoria for over a year. He recently bought out his partner of three years as a result of "conflicting interests"

A good way to begin the meal is with an appetizer/salad, which ranges from $2.25-$4.25. Try the anti pasto salad. For $4.25, taste a bed of crisp lettuce, pitted black olives, chunks of mozzarella cheese. sweet red onions, and rolled salami served with a house vinaigrette. Other appetizers include hot Italian bread sticks, garlic bread with or without melted mozzarella, and the soup of the day - black bean soup, New England clam chowder or lentil soup.

Weekly specials are displayed on a chalkboard above the checker board patterned floor. The dining area is decorated with soft pastels of yellow and pink. The house specials include marinara or white clam sauce with linguine. All specials on display include a choice of two pasta specials, which range from $4.25-$9.95. The trattoria feels little like a cafe in an Italian village - there's a colorful mural of tomatoes and streaks of blue sky on a cloudy day.

The master cook's favorite dish is a special - chicken in a sundried tomato sauce at $9.95. Prepared with sun-dried tomatoes, heavy cream, parmesan cheese, chicken stock and herbs, this entree is sauteed until the sauce is condensed, then the chicken is added and served with pasta. All dishes come in huge portions.

At the trattoria, "We want everyone to take home something they can eat the next day; we want everyone to get their money's worth," says Mr. Smith.

Sandwich lover? Foccacia stuffed Italian sandwich made from homemade Italian bread with olive oil - is ideal. While hot, they stuff bread pockets with a variety of delicacies, like provolone, salami or eggplant parmesan. Prices range from $5.50-$5.95.

For groups up to four, thin crust pizza is ideal. The cooks combine mozzarella, homemade tomato sauce, and up to three meats (without extra cost) and vegetables of choice. This 18-inch pizza pie goes Or bring your own.

The pizza ranges $5.50-$7.95 and you might want to try Cal's Favorite Pizza which is an eggplant Florentine - eggplant stuffed with ricotta and served with mozzarella and tomatoes on a crisp crust.

"The crust is phenomenal," says host Kermit Wade about stuffed pizza. Stuffed pizza is made for two to four people (depending on the size ordered). A double-crust pizza is stuffed with ingredients such as in the Spondarosa: meatballs, ricotta cheese and onions.

Calzones are also quite popular. This baked bread comes with mozzarella cheese and ricotta, served with tomato sauce. There are five calzones to choose from which range from $5.50-$6.50. Vegetarian lover's would enjoy the Vegetarian which comes with tomatoes, mushrooms, onions and peppers; while meat lovers might go with St. James, a calzone filled with sausage. Mezzaluna comes with ham, peppers and onions.

Stop next door at the pasta shop, an extension of The Church St. Trattoria opened seven months ago. Homemade fettucini, linguine and angel hair pasta are sold by the pound. Prices vary from $2.95-$3.20 per pound.

For dessert lovers, the Decadence Moose Cake will impress. It's a semi-sweet chocolate mousse cake with oreo cookie crust. "It's very light and won't bog you down Church St. Trattoria, 94 Church Wade

Tips on dining

ered a time of year for at-home gatherings, for basting turkeys and baking pies at the family hearth. But in fact, restaurateurs around the country report that the holidays are their busies time of year, and that diners often make reservations weeks in advance, to ensure their holiday meal is spent relaxed and seated at a table, rather than standing behind a stove all afternoon long.

A recent survey by American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc. of some of the nation's leading restaurateurs resulted in the following tips on making (and keeping) a restaurant reservation during the holiday season:

· Always make a reservations and, if you cannot honor it, cancel promptly.

"We always encourage our customers to make reservations, especially during the holidays. If for some reason they have to cancel, I always tell them how much I appreciate their calling to cancel, even if it's 15 minutes after reservation time," says Chris Myers, general manager, Michela's, Boston.

•Notify the restaurant of any special requirements (i.e. going to the theater, din-ing with children or elderly parents).

'Communicate all the specifics of your evening to us so that we can serve you better," says Wiley Nomura, general manager, Russian Tea Room, New York

• Use your reservation call to do advance planning for your special holiday meal (i.e. to inquire if there is a holiday menu, etc.).

holidays are traditionally consid- customers," says Joyce Goldstein, chef/ owner of Square One, San Francisco. · Let the restaurant know if the size of your party changes.

'If you make a reservation for four and your party increases or decreases, call and let us know. It helps us give better service.' says Horst Pfeifer, owner of Bella Luna, New Orleans

· If you're hosting a holiday party, you might want to consider making payment arrangements in advance of the meal.

We're happy to accommodate special requests for handling the bill. Often cus-tomers will give us their charge card when they arrive and ask us to add a 20 percent tip, and at the end of the meal they excuse themselves from the table to sign the charge slip," say Marc and Nat Comisar, owners of Maisonette, Cincinnati.

· Call the restaurant if your party is running late by more than 10 or 15 minutes

Because other patrons are waiting for tables, we can only hold a reservation for 20 minutes. If customers arrive afterward, we need to treat them as walk-ins. For people who honor reservations and are on time, we obtain an address and offer a frequent diner discount, preferred seating, etc.," says Marc Sheldon, of Great Steaks, Gainesville, Fla.

• Treat a restaurant reservation with the same degree of commitment as an airline ticket.

We all buy airline tickets in advance and arrive at the appointed time for takeoff. We don't buy a ticket for a 2 o'clock flight and We're only too happy to discuss special wander in about 3 asking to take off," says

Add on to jewelry for the holidays

A dding on is the way to go this holiday season. When thinking of what to buy her for the holidays, think of something that will build her jewelry wardrobe and her appreciation of you. If it dangles, stacks, attaches or drops, it's the hot jewelry item today.

"Add-ons make great gifts for the giver and receiver," says Mike Roman, chairman of Jewelers of America (JA), the world's largest jewelry association. "They can adopt to fashion changes as well as your budget. And what woman doesn't love to receive a gift of jewelry."

According to JA, earrings, bracelets and necklaces can all achieve dramatically different looks with simple add-ons. A pair of gold hoop earrings can be adorned with dangling charms. Charms can be casual or even dressy.

Is she a career woman? Give her earring jackets for her diamond or cultured pearl studs. Or, give her a pendant that doubles as a pin – one that is bold or has colored gemstones to enhance her business suit. You can even purchase a bracelet that actually hooks onto her necklace so she has one or two pieces of jewelry depending on her mood.

If she likes to go out, gold and diamond add-ons offer a nice look for the evening. Dramatic shapes of stars, hearts or any type of bold design are available as dangles or even pendants for that gold choker or long necklace. Or give her additional bangles in different colors to go with the ones she already wears.

Stackable rings are also a popular way to change looks. You can purchase one or two rings to stack on top of ones she already has or buy one at a time to build her jewelry wardrobe.

"The beauty of these 'add-on' pieces is that a major investment is never needed," adds Mr. Roman. "You can buy as needed or desired — to go with a specific outfit or just on a whim."

This popular trend in jewelry is a wonderful gift because there's always an opportunity to "add on." Women can now have fun with their jewelry.

For a series of free brochures on what you should know about fine jewelry, consumers can write to JA at 1185 Sixth Ave., 30th floor, NY, NY 10036.

Holiday turkey safety

When should I buy the turkey?

The National Safety Council reminds you that your frozen turkey can be purchased months in advance with no loss in quality or taste. Wrap the turkey in heavy freezer wrap to prevent freezer burn. However, a fresh bird should be bought only one to two days before cooking time.

How should I thaw a turkey?

Thawing a turkey in the refrigerator is the preferred method. Allow one day for every five pounds. After the turkey is completely thawed, it can last an additional one or two days in the refrigerator. After thawing, remove neck and giblets, then wash the turkey inside and out with cold water. Finally, wash your hands, utensils, sink and anything else that has been in contact with the raw turkey.

Can I thaw a turkey in water?

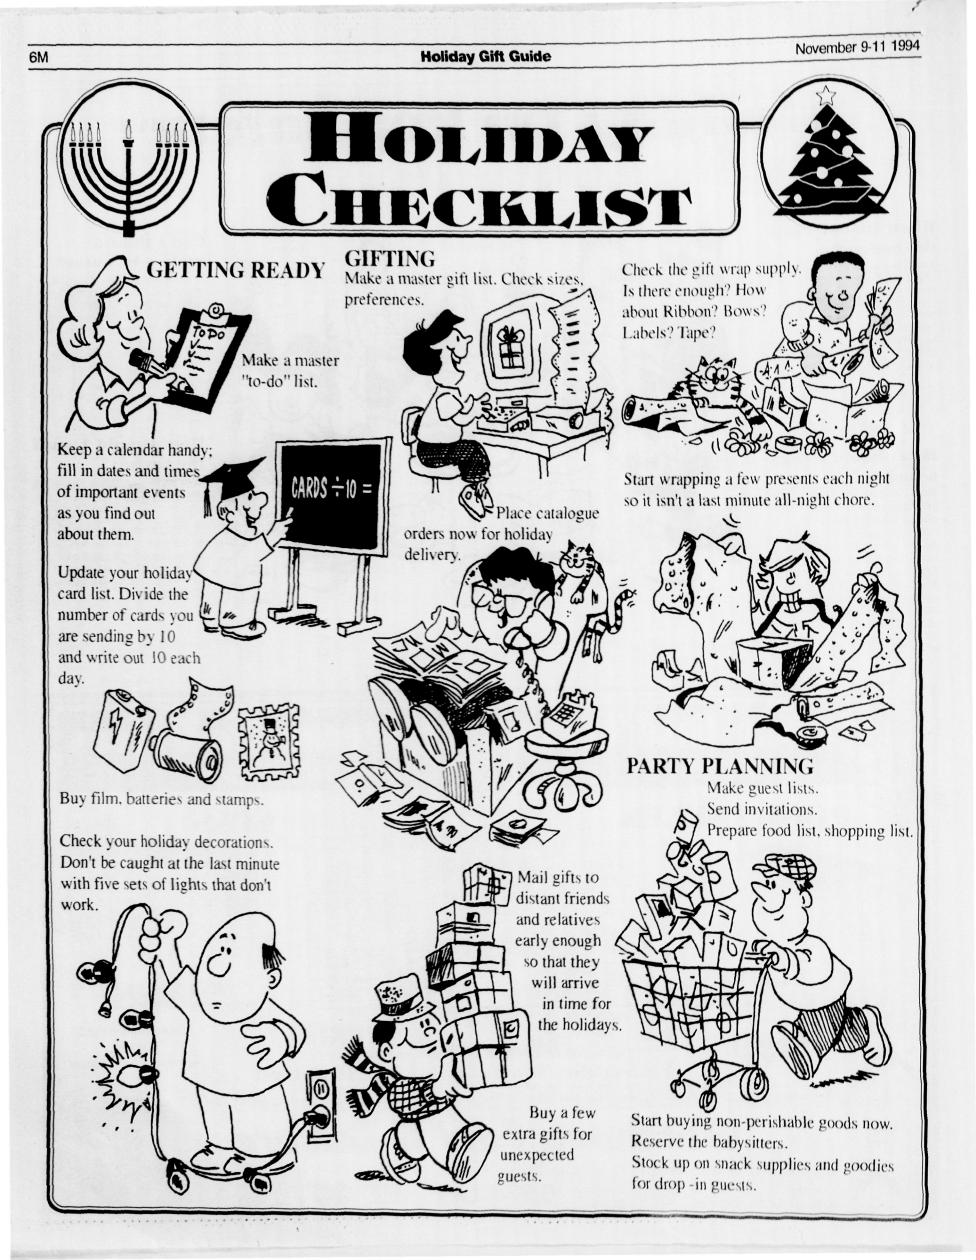

In a hurry? Thaw the turkey in a clean sink. Put it in a heavy freezer bag secured with a twist tie. Submerge the bird in cold water, changing the water every 30 minutes to keep it cool. Allow 30 minutes per pound to defrost using this method. Cook the bird as soon as it has thawed.

How should I stuff the turkey?

Stuff the turkey loosely just before you put it in the oven.

The USDA's Meat and Poultry Hotline can be reached on Thanksgiving Day from 8 a.m.-2 p.m. or year round Monday-Friday, 10 a.m.-4 p.m. The toll-free number is (800) 535-4555.

Holiday Gift Guide

Memorable holiday gifts are easy to make

w things make more personal gifts than photos. A framed enlargement of a special memory shared with a loved one is always appreciated and a photographic card is truly worth "a thousand words" when it's sent to far-away friends and family during the holiday season. What's more, creative photographic gifts are as much fun to make as they are to receive.

For those who want to get creative this holiday season — without spending a bundle — Eastman Kodak Company offers 10 great ways to turn traditional photos into extra-special gifts.

1. Instead of writing a recipient's name on packages, create photo cards. Cut photos into fun, holiday-oriented shapes, like stars, trees or snowmen, and paste on a slightly larger piece of colored paper cut into the same shape.

2. Photos make terrific bookmarks. Simply cut people or interesting objects out of a photo, paste on cardboard, then laminate. (When pasted on popsicle sticks, the photo cutouts also make great "puppets" for kids).

3. Holiday greeting cards mean so much more when they feature a photo on the front cover. In fact, according to a recent poll conducted on behalf of Kodak, 77 percent of families include photos with their holiday greeting cards.

4. Have each family member create a keepsake ornament with a photo of themselves. Simply place a photo into a miniature picture frame (available at most hardware stores for less than $2), add colored ribbons, and hang.

5. What could be cuter than a personalized hair ribbon or barrette made especially for a favorite little girl? Simply cut a photo to fit inside a round frame, or paste directly onto a piece of cardboard. Laminate, then add colored ribbons, beads of elastics.

6. A simple enlargement with a custom border, presented in a beautiful Kodak frame, will provide wonderful memories for a lifetime to come.

7. What child wouldn't love a T-shirt, sweatshirt or key chain with a photo of himself on it? All can be easily made with photo transfers available at photofinishers and even mall kiosks.

8. Create a special wreath with a photo of the entire family. Take a favorite photo, enlarge it, and mount it inside a store-bought wreath.

9. Keep in touch with an old friend by designing a personal scrapbook of photos and mementos from good times the two of you had together.

10. Photo key chains make great stocking stuffers for everyone the list. cut a favorite photo into a rectangular shape and insert in a Lucite key chain holder.

Make your holiday cooking less hectic

To make time-crunched days less stressful, simple solutions may be closer than you think.

1. Use frozen foods. Take advantage of reduced-calorie and low-fat products to help keep your diet in check. Preparation is a snap and cleanup is a breeze. Think about all the knives, pots, pans, chopping blocks, serving platters and utensils you won't have to wash after raiding your freezer.

2. Add bread and salad to make a hearty meal. For dinner, serve a frozen entree with a basket of rolls on the side and a large tossed salad.

3. Keep "appetizing" foods on hand for unexpected guests. Take advantage of frozen appetizers. Sliced French bread pizza makes a great snack for holiday well-wishers who drop by unexpectedly.

3. Let your family pitch in. Even the culinary-challenged know how to use the microwave and turn on the oven, so assign them dinner duty with frozen foods.
